SATURDAY MORNING.....JULY 19, 1884.

An Exposure of the Charges.

NO ACT OPPOSED TO LABOR

INTELLIGENT VETOES OF SOME OBNOXIOUS MEASURES.

From the Philadelphia Times.

The grounds upon which it is sought to create prejudice against Gov. Cleveland are his vetoes of the five-cent fare bill, the mechanics' lien bill and the bill regulating the hours of labor of drivers and conductors of horse cars. The bill fixing the fare on the elevated railways at five cents abrogated a right vested in the corporation by a previous Legislature. In that act the regulation of fares was distinctly surrendered by the State until the net earnings should reach a given sum. In spite of this agreement in the contract the Legislature of 1883 passed a bill making the uniform rate of fare five cents. The Governor vetoed it on the ground that the Legislature could not abrogate a vested right. There was not the slightest doubt that the courts of the State would have taken the same view.

That the proposed reductions were only of the slightest interest to workingmen is shown by the fact that the rate had long been 5 cents from 5.30 to 8.30 a. m. and from 4.30 to 7.30 p. m. The reduction of fares at other hours in the day was a manifest advantage to bankers, brokers, business men and amusement seekers, but not of the smallest interest to laboring men and mechanics, who already had the privileges the vetoed bill conferred. Opposition to the vote was short-lived, and a feeling of satisfaction followed that one man had been found who had the pluck and the intelligence to oppose such futile legislation even at the risk of incurring popular disapproval.

The Governor also interposed his veto to the mechanics' lien bill. The original intention of this bill was to give mechanics power to secure their wages by the means of liens. But it was so amended that its purpose was either obscured or lost. It gave parties four months after performance of work or furnishing of material to file a lien, a period ridiculously prolonged. It also allowed the same costs as in foreclosures, which in the case of small bills would have been so onerous as to eat them up entirely. But, worst of all, it repealed existing mechanics' lien laws, which were far more favorable to the working people than the new law. It was found to be a scheme to make increased lawyer's bills and to diminish the protection afforded the mechanic. The Governor very properly accepted the lesser evil and vetoed the defective bill.

The bill making twelve hours a day's work for conductors and drivers on street cars did not in any way prohibit the making of a contract requiring any number of hours' work, and if it had the Governor very aptly objected that it was an interference with the rights of the employees as well as employers. It was plain that if the car drivers and conductors worked fewer hours they would receive less pay, and the bill neither did nor could prevent that. The Governor concluded his objections by saying: "I cannot think this bill is in the interest of the workingmen."

One charge remains against Gov. Cleveland's vetoes. The last Legislature made a small appropriation for a charitable institution known as the Westchester Catholic Protectory. The Governor struck it out, and the charge has been made that he was hostile to the Catholic church as such. Mr. Henry L. Hogner, president of the protectory, says on this question: "We never doubted the sincerity of the motive which induced Governor Cleveland to withhold his signature to the appropriation to the protectory. We thought then and think now that he was not actuated by any feeling of bigotry or of hostility to Catholics or the Catholic institutions. On the contrary, Gov. Cleveland is liberal in the extreme, and we are of the firm belief that he was led to withholding his approval of the appropriation solely by a sense of public duty as he viewed it."

Upon these facts are based all the charges made against Grover Cleveland, by which it is sought to raise objection to him among the laboring and religious elements.

A SAMPLE PLANK.

The Republican platform says:

"We believe that everywhere the protection to a citizen of American birth must be secured to citizens of American adoption."

The law of the United States, Section 2,000 of the Revised Statutes, says:

"All naturalized citizens of the United States, while in foreign countries, are entitled to, and shall receive, from this Government the same protection of persons and property which is accorded to native-born citizens."

This is the law. Its administration and execution for twenty-three years have been in the hands of the Republican party, and here we have, in 1884, that party solemnly declaring in its national platform that what the law has all along given to naturalized citizens "must be secured to them."

The law secures it to them, and under its administration and execution by successive democratic administrations all naturalized citizens of the United States while in foreign countries, had from the government the same protection of persons and property the law and its execution accorded to native-born citizens.

A democratic congress and president made the law and democratic administrations enforced it.

The republican convention seems to have forgotten there was such a law, having left it in abeyance for twenty-three years and start up now with one of the old revised statutes as a bran new proposition.

They might as well have put in their platform any other one of the 5,601 revised statutes, or one of ten commandments, or one of the mathematical axioms.

Its claptrap, put in the platform to catch the Irish vote, but it will not work. Naturalized citizens are satisfied with the law as it is; and will be satisfied with its enforcement after the fourth of March next, when it will pass into democratic hands.

Why have not republican administrations secured to our naturalized citizens what the laws give them?—Easton Ledger.

FATAL EFFECTS OF A LECTURE.—A Liquor Dealer hears a Temperance Discourse and Suddenly Expires.—A special to the New York Evening Post from Halifax, N. S., says that on Saturday evening last Gen. Samuel A. Carey, Sr. P. W. P. of the National Division, Sons of Temperance, lectured on temperance in the Park Street Rink. The audience filled the building. The lecturer delivered a stirring address, pointing out the evils of intemperance and the many causes which led men and women into the downward path. Before closing he addressed himself particularly to liquor sellers. His language was extremely strong. According to the General, there was no hope for the unfortunate men or women who might be interested in the "devil's business." Such would have to turn from their wickedness at once or be doomed to endless perdition. Among the audience was William Lowe, a liquor dealer of the city, a prominent Free Mason and esteemed citizen. The speech of Gen. Carey had an effect so great upon Mr. Lowe that immediately upon reaching his home he was taken ill and lived only two hours. He had been trading in Halifax for fifteen years, and although he had always handled liquor in his business, he had ever been somewhat averse to the sale of it. His wife was always opposed to his continuing in the liquor business, and often urged him to give it up. Conversing with a friend at the close of the meeting Mr. Lowe seemed greatly agitated, and said he regretted having had anything to do with liquor. His friends think that his excitement on this account caused his death.

THE new steamer Chesapeake has been completed for the Choptank route and will take her place on the line next week. This steamer is a very handsomely modeled vessel, built of white oak, with galvanized fastenings. She is 138 ft. long, 24 feet beam, 8 feet depth of hold, and has a carrying capacity for 10,000 bushels of wheat or 300 tons of freight. The line now comprises the steamers Ruggles, Minnie Wheeler and the Chesapeake.

A BOTTLE of whiskey was put into the cornerstone of the court-house at Gwinnett, Ga., twelve years ago, and now, as the building is being demolished, there was a great deal of anxiety as to the matured liquor. More than a thousand persons crowded round the workmen, and something like a riot ensued, during which the precious bottle was stolen by some person or persons as yet unknown.

OVER the door of Cephas' cell in Cambridge, Md., hangs a curtain bearing a placard upon which the following is written:

"NOTICE.—All persons who desire to see me can do so by giving five cents, which we used in paying the expense of removing my body to Williamsburg for burial. FREDERICK CEPHAS."

GROVER CLEVELAND commenced life on $60 a year. He is now a candidate for President. This is another illustration of the beauties of our system of government, and shows what possibilities are before industrious young men in this country.

THE POPULAR PULSE.

Hearty Indorsement by the New York Business Men.

The democratic nominations at Chicago are heartily indorsed by the business men of New York, irrespective of party. When Cleveland's nomination was announced on the New York Produce Exchange there was immense enthusiasm, which seemed to take the form of an immense ratification meeting, and the scenes on the Stock Exchange were hardly less enthusiastic. The current expressions indicate the drift of sentiment among the solid men of New Yoak.

H. B. Claflin, millionaire merchant, and a republican: "Cleveland will be elected and he will make an excellent President. I am delighted at his nomination." Frederick D. Tappan, president of the Gallatin National Bank, said that he had always been a republican, but he should certainly vote for Cleveland. As between Blaine and Cleveland there was no comparison. "Cleveland is sure to be elected," said Mr. Tappan. "It is the best possible nomination that could have been made. As to the result, I think that if the democratic party cannot elect a man like Cleveland they never can elect anybody. If they fail with him they might as well shut up shop, for they never could win." J. D. Vermilye, (rep.,) president of the Merchants' National Bank: "I am rejoiced at Cleveland's nomination and will vote for him." Gen. Francis C. Barlow: "I am a republican, but, like many others, I shall vote for Cleveland." L. H. Smith, president of the New York Petroleum Exchange: "I have always been a republican, but I shall vote for Cleveland this time. He will make a good President." Major H. V. King, a prominent member of the Cotton Exchange, a strong republican: "I shall vote for Cleveland because he is a clean man. He has not sought the office, as Blaine did, and has no bad record behind him. He has made a good Governor and I think would make a good President. I know many republicans who will vote for him." Frederick Schlesinger, a well-known dealer in foreign Exchange: "I was a republican until Grover Cleveland was elected Governor. I have been a Cleveland man ever since, and I shall give him my heartiest support for the presidency. I am glad Kelly has been 'downed.'" Ex-Mayor Grace: "He is the best man the democrats could have nominated. He represents the progress and reform of the party." H. K. Thurber: "I have always voted the republican ticket, but this year my vote shall be cast for Cleveland." Mr. Devlin, of the great clothing firm of Devlin & Co., said he regarded the nomination of Cleveland as the strongest that could have been made from a business point of view. Wilson G. Hunt: "It is the only nomination that could be made. If Cleveland cannot carry New York no one can. I feel certain he will sweep the State." Mr. Carl Schurz expressed the opinion that Cleveland would carry New York by a majority similar to that which he obtained two years ago.

TONE OF THE PRESS.

Baltimore Sun: Pledged by his record, first as mayor of Buffalo and afterwards as Governor of the great State of New York, to the cause of honest government, in opposition to the devious methods and corrupt schemes of the class of politicians who have done so much to discredit American institutions, Grover Cleveland is regarded by reformers of both parties not only as the most available man the democrats could nominate, but also as the kind of man most needed at Washington, and as the candidate of the democratic party he stands as the representative of the youth, the progress, the hope, the very life of the only country upon the earth in which liberty and equality find their truest interpretation and their most complete realization. For the second place on the ticket the name of ex-Gov. Hendricks, of Indiana, will be regarded by democrats, especially those who wished for the renomination of "the old ticket," as particularly appropriate. Whatever strength the Indianian contributed to the ticket of 1876 he will also add to the ticket of 1884. In selecting Cleveland and Hendricks from the two pivotal States the democracy, it will be generally conceded, have made the strongest combination possible within the area to which they confined their choice.

Baltimore Day: Grover Cleveland received the nomination of the Democratic convention because he represented the principles of reform as embodied in his own personal work in New York, and the bitter opposition to him from his State is the strongest possible testimony to the purity and the thoroughness of the work he did. He routed the thieves from their dens and they turned upon him to revenge their wrongs. But the wrongs of thieves are blessings to honest men, and if Governor Cleveland lost popularity in New York by the grip he took on the throats of John Kelly, Grady and other wharf rats he deserves the applause of every respectable citizen of the United States, in or out of the Democratic party. Governor Cleveland's record is short but to the point.

The New York Herald says: "The Herald puts at the head of its columns the democratic ticket for President and Vice-President of the United States. We congratulate the democratic party upon the work of its convention at Chicago, and the oppertunity it offers to the American people through a union of patriotic voters, by whatever name they call themselves—democrats, independents, labor reformers, or whatsoever else—to redeem the country from the disgrace and peril to which the republican party has plotted to expose it by the thoroughly bad nominations of Blaine and Logan."

The New York Evening Telegram, one of the most influential independent newspapers in the country, speaking of the nomination of Cleveland and Hendricks, says: "The Democratic Convention has proved itself worthy of the confidence placed in its judgment and good sense. All that malignity and vituperation could bring to bear against the nomination of Grover Cleveland was employed by Tammany in just the same manner as that notorious organization did with Tilden eight years ago. The result was the same in both instances and it may be expected that the parallel will be carried out on the day of election. There it will undoubtedly cease, for even with such a reckless political freebooter as the Republican nominee that party will hardly venture to repeat the Presidential steal of 1876."

The New York Times, independent republican, declares its purpose to support Cleveland and Hendricks and predicts for them an overwhelming victory in New York and their triumphant election.

John Kelly's organ at Albany, N. Y., the Evening Times has hoisted the names of Cleveland and Hendricks.

The Utica, N. Y., Daily Press, Independent Republican and workingmen's organ, has come out for Cleveland.

The Free Press, a German republican paper, published in Brookly, N. Y., has come out for Cleveland.

GOV. CLEVELAND AT HOME.—The high esteem in which Gov. Cleveland is held in Buffalo, his old home, was shown in a striking manner Monday evening. There was an impromptu ratification meeting, which drew out almost the entire population of the city. Main street was ablaze with pyrotechnics, and over 1,000 men with torches paraded the streets, which were crowded with enthusiastic people. After the parade a number of addresses were delivered. Dr. Edward Storck, a prominent German physician and leading republican, was one of the speakers, and pledged his best efforts for the success of the democratic ticket. Senator Titus predicted a majority for Cleveland in Erie county of 8,000 or 9,000, despite the fact that the county is always republican except when Cleveland is a candidate. Ex-Congressman Lockwood, who nominated Cleveland at Chicago, responded in an eloquent address. He recited the Governor's political history, and said that his nomination was a protest against the party that for more than twenty years had held the power at Washington. The demonstration is conceded to have been one of the most enthusiastic and brilliant ever witnessed in Buffalo.

MR. DWIGHT L. MOODY, the American evangelist, sailed for New York on Saturday. In an interview with a reporter of the Pall Mall Gazette, Mr. Moody said he believed that London was now the most religious city in the world. London, he said, possessed what hardly any other great metropolis had—a vast amount of "sanctified wealth." Sanctified wealth was rare in America. Nearly all the rich men in the United States were born poor. "In my opinion" concluded Mr. Moody, "America requires missionaries more than England does."

JACKSON GROVE CAMP of the Methodist Protestant Church, on the Baltimore & Potomac Railroad, 17 miles from Baltimore, will open on Thursday, July 31, and close on Wednesday, August 13. The present indications point to an attendance largely in excess of that of last year.

AUGUSTUS SLATER, charged with shooting Wm. McGowan in Baltimore on Tuesday the 15th inst., was brought before Judge Duffy in the City Court on Saturday on a writ of habeas corpus, and released on $5,000 for his appearance at court.

S. SNYDER BARNES, aged 20, fell from a load of wheat, near Freedom, Carroll county, one day last week, with a pitchfork in his hand. One of the prongs pierced his heart, and he died almost immediately.

A CRATE of peaches from near Smyrna was sold in Boston last week for $15.

LETTER FROM PINE NECK.

Messrs. Editors:—After an absence of about two years I return to find that the spirit of enterprise is not entirely lacking, or even in part, but that it has seized this people, head, neck and boots, and is in downright earnest. The first thing that meets the eye of the newcomer is the marked and observable changes that so short a time has made. New, cozy and snug cottages are going up; woods being cleared off, and general improvements are being made. Among the most noticeable is a hall for a private beneficial society, which has just been completed, and a very respectable residence for E. R. Strong, Esq., one of our enterprising Pine Neck merchants; the work being done by Messrs. Albert Walker, J. W. McClary, Geo. M. and C. Wesley Rollison, and we think when it is completed that it will make a snug little home for the young merchant and his future partner, which, I understand, he will soon take. Messrs. Editors, there is a maxim that runs something like this: "The reason why so many marriages are made unhappy is because they think more about getting the bird, and not the cage;" which we think there is a good deal of logic in, but in this case we believe that the young gentleman has acted the part of a philosopher.

Messrs. Editors, we have no "Simon Sharp," no "Walter," no "Original," but we have good fishermen, good oystermen and good sailors, which makes up for the geniuses otherwise. So taking into consideration the improvements named, and others too numerous to mention, it will be seen that Pine Neck is fast becoming the centre of gravity, and is growing more like New York every day.

Now that the two great political parties have made their nominations it will be fair to presume that there will be some tall mud throwing very soon now; as it commenced in June to be stirred, and the recent nomination is helping it on toward the climax, and before the 4th of November next, "Stand from under!" What better way could there be to learn the history and the lives of men, than to put them up for a political office to be elected by the vote of a nation of fifty millions? READER.
