SATURDAY MORNING..... Dec. 13, 1884.

THE METHODIST CENTENNIAL.

A Historic Gathering in Baltimore City.

First M. E. Church, corner Charles and Fayette streets, Baltimore whose congregation is the lineal successor of that which worshiped in the Lovely Lane Meeting-House, in which the Christmas conference was held in 1784, was crowded last Tuesday night with Methodists from all sections of the country, assembled to participate in the preliminary exercises connected with the opening of the Methodist Centennial Conference.

This Centennial Conference of American Methodism is the largest body of Methodists ever assembled in this country. It is a delegated body and numbers about six hundred. The conference is neither legislative nor executive, and cannot pass laws or rules to govern the churches, but is a monster reunion of Methodists from all sections of the country. It is computed that the conference represents four millions of members belonging to the several branches of this religious denomination, and estimated as a community of twenty millions of persons. This estimate does not take into account that branch of the denomination which is known as the Methodist Protestant, and which does not recognize episcopacy in Methodism. Nevertheless, from a sentiment of fraternal regard, these also send four delegates, two ministerial and two lay, in token of good-will.

The Baltimore Sun thus refers to the past history of the Church: Methodism was founded at Oxford, England, in 1729 by John and Chas. Wesley, who drew around them a few persons, and thus started the new movement. It spread rapidly, through the vigorous and eloquent preaching of John Wesley, through all parts of England. In 1736 the tenets of Methodism were introduced for the first time in this country by John Wesley in person, during the two years he resided in Georgia as a missionary of the Propagation Society. At first the Wesleys moved on lines which enabled them to work within the Church of England, but John Wesley, under the influence of the teachings of Peter Bohler, a Moravian, was converted in 1738 to more pronounced evangelism. It has been said of him he had a forgotten gospel to preach—the gospel by which men were to be converted, as he had been, and to be made "new creatures." To raise up such a body of converted men, to help him in his organizing labors, to arrange them into classes and societies, to combine the teaching in the pulpit with the private and personal influence of the class-meeting, became the work of his life. In a country like the United States annual camp-meetings took the place of the open-air meetings of Methodist preachers in England, and exerted a powerful influence in adding to the membership of what was at first a simple religious association, but which has now grown into vast proportions. It is not, therefore, without reason that the Methodists of this country and of Canada will meet together to celebrate in this city, by a grand reunion of representative men, the centennial anniversary of the organization of Episcopal Methodism. The proceedings for the ensuing week as laid down in the published programme do not include any change of polity in the church or any new departure in doctrine. They will be principally historical, explanatory and statistical, and will include a grand Sabbath school jubilee, in which all the schools of affiliated Methodism in Baltimore, numbering about thirty-five thousand persons, will participate. The occasion will mark the close of one century of successful religious work and the beginning of another, in which the ministers will doubtless labor with the same earnestness and zeal for which the leading spirits of this denomination have been distinguished in the past. There is a peculiar appropriateness in the selection of Baltimore as the place for the meeting of the Centennial Conference, in view of the fact that the first Methodist conference was held in this city in December, 1784.

THE WASHINGTON MONUMENT.—On Saturday the obelisk commemorative of Washington, the corner-stone of which was laid July 4, 1848, was completed by putting in place the marble capstone and its apex of polished aluminium. The ceremonial with which this notable event was marked was extremely simple, the more elaborate celebration being reserved for Washington's Birthday. Having a total height of 555 feet and 4 inches, the monument exceeds in altitude every other structure of human hands. The great pyramid of Cheops had an original height of but 479 feet. The top of the cross on St. Peter's is 448 feet from the pavement, and the Cathedral of Strasburg rises but 468 feet. Even the spires of the famous Cathedral of Cologne fell short by 30 feet of the height attained by the Washington monument.

THE TRAGEDY OF THE RIVALS.

DOUBLY FATAL AFFRAY GROWING OUT OF LOVE FOR A BEAUTIFUL GIRL.

A dispatch to the New York Herald dated Chattanooga, Tenn., Dec. 8, says:

The doubly fatal affray between William Moore and John Adams, two prominent young men living near McKinney, Tenn., causes widespread comment and is in all respects the most sensational incident that has occurred in this section in years. The following additional particulars of the tragedy have been ascertained:

The young men were rival suitors for the hand of a beautiful mountain belle, the daughter of a wealthy farmer residing in their county. The rivalry was of long standing, but the young men were fast friends and they did not permit it to lessen their regard for each other. Recently the young lady began to show a marked preference for Adams, and their engagement soon followed. Moore, on becoming cognizant of the fact, ceased his attentions and seemed to accept his defeat gracefully. The friendly relations between the young men continued, and they frequently alluded to the approaching marriage.

Last Saturday they went hunting, and after a day's successful sport they started home, each laden with game, and were chatting in the best of spirits. In the course of their conversation Adams spoke of his approaching nuptials and boasted of the superior attractions which had won the lady's heart. Moore seemed nettled by the taunts of his quondam rival and retorted sharply. At this Adams began to taunt him, and intimated that he lacked the qualities to win a female heart, and from this a hot quarrel arose. Moore arose suddenly became white with rage and jealousy, and throwing his gun to his shoulder he levelled it at the deriding rival, and before he took a second thought fired. Adams received the load in his breast.

He staggered and reeled, but in falling caught himself and fell on his knees. The blood gushed forth from a score of wounds, but consciousness still remained. Nerving his strength with the desperation of a dying man, he shrieked, "You shall not live to win her," and fired on his adversary. The aim was true, and Moore fell to the ground on his face, his head riddled with shot. The rivals lay in death throes within a few feet of each other for some hours, and when they were discovered Moore was dead, but Adams was still alive and had strength remaining to relate the circumstances ere he died shortly afterward.

BESIEGING SENATOR GORMAN.—One of the doorkeepers of the Senate said to the Washington correspondent of the New York Commercial-Advertiser on Wednesday:

"Senator Gorman is beginning to experience some of the unpleasant features connected with the recent democratic victory. He has had five times as many callers as any other Senator since the Senate came together on Monday, and even now there are a dozen persons either waiting in the reception room or loitering about the corridors waiting to secure an interview with him. It is safe to say that the mission of every one of these is to secure the Senator's influence to aid them in getting an office when Cleveland assumes his duties as President." A large number of these callers, he said, were from Maryland.

THE FARTRIDGE LAW IN QUEEN ANNE'S.—According to the new partridge law published as operative in this county, says the Centreville Observer, shooting or otherwise killing of any partridge is forbidden from today (Dec. 2) until the first day of November next. There is a discrepancy between the journal of proceedings and the published law, the former allowing the shooting of partridges until the 24th of December. Whether it is safe to shoot these birds after today is a question the courts will have to decide, the framers of the law claiming that it was intended to have the season open until the 24th.

LETTER FROM FAIRLEE.

On the 10th ultimo a religious meeting was begun in Salem Church in this place, and has continued with unabated and increasing interest up to the present time. As announced in the NEWS of the 15th ult., the following Sabbath day, the 23d, the meeting passed into the hands of Mrs. Elizabeth R. Smith, a zealous evangelist of Philadelphia. On the evening of that day the house was packed to its full comfortable capacity. Many, doubtless, attracted by curiosity and the novelty of a woman preacher, and many, no doubt, by other and better motives. On the following Sabbath the building was crowded beyond its comfortable capacity. Quite a number being compelled to leave and many who remained being unable to obtain seats. Up to the present time there have been over forty conversions, and many are still seeking to enter the fold of the Good Shepherd. Many who had grown lukewarm or cold have been wonderfully blessed and renewed. Is the work ephemeral and transient? Nay, verily. This truly christian lady lays the foundation deep and solid, for truly indeed "other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ." Her success is evidently due in a great measure to her own rich spiritual experience and high attainment in the inward revelations of the Holy Spirit, which give her an earnestness of manner which cannot be counterfeited nor doubted. Her methods are not materially different from other evangelistic workers, save that she inculcates more distinctively and emphatically the gospel of love. There is no fierce denunciations whatever. Added to her affable and courteous manner and pleasant address is a quick apprehension of character. She is an apt reader of human nature and quick to adapt herself to its multifarious phases. She is no theorist but deals largely in stubborn facts, challenging contradiction. A deep impression has been made on this community and arrangements are now being made to hold on Tuesday next, 16th inst., a day's meeting, commencing at 9 o'clock A. M. and closing about 9 P. M. Friends attending will provide simple food and lunch on the church green. Should the day prove unpropitious the meeting will be held the next day, 17th, at the same hour. All—saint and sinner—will be cordially welcome.

The deep and wide-spread interest taken in this revival has overshadowed all other subjects, although a private note received from Worton mentions the fact that a certain person, somewhat prominent, returned from Baltimore the day before the election and shouted for Blaine, and now is a red-hot Cleveland democrat. It is strongly surmised that a superabundance of fire-water rendered the voter oblivious of what kind of vote he really did cast. SIMON SHARP.

MUSICAL NOTES.

NEAR GALENA, December 10, 1884.

Messrs. Editors: — In spite of the blustery weather a fair audience was in attendance at the repetition of the Cantata "Under the Palms," on Tuesday last at Galena, given as you remember for the benefit of Geo. A. Smith. We have looked for a communication from "Observer," "Index," "Visitor," or some other Galena correspondent, commendatory of the previous singing of this cantata by the same company, but looked in vain. Some notice of the talent exhibited on the occasion of this musical treat is certainly called for. There are an unusual number of good natural voices in this village and the cantata called forth their power. For amateurs, having had a limited amount of practice, the time, sweetness and volume displayed in this attempt to publicly sing classical music, was not to be hooted at. Rev. Geo. Townsend is worthy of first mention by his excellent tenor on a half dozen or more solos in the cantata. He always sings with power and particular distinctness. In soft solos the Misses Ida Moore, Lena Ruth, Annie and Emma Hyland, and Marian Benny excelled any previous attempts made by them in public. On alto solos and duets who could have done better than did the Misses Maggie Knighton and Lydia Davis? Mrs. Phelps sang her alto parts with pathetic effect that called forth favorable comments from many. Mr. F. P. Lloyd's tenor was distinctly sung, and though a somewhat new part for him to sustain, we noticed that he improved at each presentation of the cantata. Dr. Phelps sang several bass solos with credit and assisted materially in the grand choruses, where Mr. W. A. Whitaker assumed the heavy bass. Mrs. Ella Whitaker in taking Miss Ireland's position, the skilled and regular organist, though unavoidably absent on this latter occasion, executed the instrumental parts with good effect and in perfect time. Our young friend, Miss Rena Gooding, as usual covered herself with the mantle of applause by her powers of recitation. The choruses were sung with spirit, and those engaged in them have reason to feel proud that they could so soon be trained into singing so sweet and historically sacred a musical composition as "Under the Palms," and all to the edification of

ONE WHO ENJOYED IT.

Fair Premiums.

GALENA, Dec. 4.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Why is it that there was no mention made in your paper of the award o premium on agricultural implements exhibited at the Worton Agr'l Fair the past fall? W. A. Hyland received first premium on the Deering Twine-Binder, Farm Wagons, Dearborns, Field Roller, 2-Horse Power Corn Sheller and Farm Bells. Second on Economist Plows and Cultivators. First on largest and best display of agricultural implements. It would be of interest to the farming public to know the above fact. —

VICTORY FOR THE WOMEN IN GEORGIA.—The question of woman's rights has had its first test in the Georgia Legislature, and resulted in favor of the women. It arose over a resolution instructing the clerk of the House to employ women to perform clerical work. In the debate which ensued it was argued that true public policy dictated the opening of every avenue of labor to women. Dr. Felton said that the employment of female clerks by the national government was inaugurated by a distinguished Georgian, and that women should enjoy the emoluments as well as the burdens of government. "Let the men," said he, "go into the field and plow and dig, and leave to the women such positions as they can fill." An attempt to table the motion was defeated by an overwhelming vote, and the motion was adopted.

THE HAPPIEST MAN.—Senator Palmer, of Michigan, who has an income of upward of $200,000 a year, says: "The happiest man is the one who has the most illusions. There are only three real substantial things that you can get out of life, and the man who has those at the required intervals is as well off as the richest. The three realities are a full stomach, a good suit of clothes and a bed to sleep in. Everything else belongs to the realm of illusions."

ABOUT a million peach trees have been set out in Kent and Sussex counties this fall. Nearly every farm has a new orchard of three hundred to three thousand trees. We shall have more peaches in this section in about four years than was ever before seen or dreamed of.—Mil. News.

THE colored people of Helena, S. C., have just completed a neat schoolhouse at that place, and, in honor of the democratic President-elect, have named it "Cleveland Academy."

At the city election in Boston last Tuesday O'Brien, democrat, was elected mayor by 3,111 majority.
