RAKED UP IN THE DREDGE.

THINGS CURIOUS AND MYSTERIOUS FROM THE BOTTOM OF THE BAY.

A grizzly-bearded, weather-beaten bay captain, whose stout form was stowed away in a yellow oilskin suit, was overhauling his dredges preparatory to a trip to the oyster shoals, when a Morley dredge reporter stepped aboard of his boat at Pratt street wharf. "Yes, this is the machine which scrapes up the oysters from the bottom of the bay," explained the brawny harpooner as he tinkered away on the side of iron mesh which forms a bag and which is fastened to two semi-circular iron ribs, and then to two connecting iron bars.

"Now, young man, don't suppose that that dredge is full of oysters every time it is hauled on deck? Well, you are a greenie, or no mistake?" And the blue-eyed mariner chuckled. "I've stowed a few oysters in my dredge, but I don't suppose you'd care to try them?"

"Wherever from half a dozen to a bushel. Most general a peck."

"What! No more than that?"

"Now, young man, don't suppose that that dredge is full of oysters every time it is hauled on deck? Well, you are a greenie, or no mistake?" And the blue-eyed mariner chuckled. "I've stowed a few oysters in my dredge, but I don't suppose you'd care to try them?"

Hard times, low wages, shrinkage of values are all having their effect on prices. The clothing market feels the effect so much as to reduce prices to almost a give-away point.

Now is your time to buy good first-class clothing, such as our stock is composed of, at the lowest figures known to us for years past.
