Dear Sir;

Your note of this evening has just been handed to me, and I am greatly obliged to you for the kind nature of its contents.

My regret that our excursion this evening was prevented, was somewhat abated by my own continued lassitude, and by the belief that every degree of exertion must prove injurious to you, while laboring under your present indisposition.

In the mean time I have found ~~time~~ opportunity for correspondence with my friends, and with the additional help of the "Ramble of a Naturalist" the whole of which I have read with deep interest, the day has passed pleasantly and, I trust, profitably. The book I returned to your office this evening.

It will afford me great plea
