Kent News.

SATURDAY MORNING.....Oct. 17, 1885.

"Dimidium Facti."

"Oh, fie! The sad thing I have heard!
A most astonishing rumor,
Just brought me by a little bird.
Has quite spoiled my good humor.
A deed that has no proper name,
And in a place secluded!
Oh, Mary, I should die with shame
To do the thing that you did!"

"Aunt, can you mean that stupid tale
Of what I said to Charley,
Because the poor boy looked so pale
When I met him in the barley?
What happened there was strictly this—
And let them make the best of it—
I gave him scarcely half a kiss,
And he gave me the rest of it!"

Prohibition in Politics.

Bishop S. M. Merrill has been an active worker in the temperance cause for the past forty years. In a letter to the Chicago Inter-Ocean he contributed some interesting and practical views upon the relation of the temperance question to politics. He cites the anti-slavery agitation, which, he justly claims, retarded rather than accelerated emancipation. He argues that organized prohibition is likewise more harmful than beneficial; that the temperance question is one that appeals not to the prejudices or the passion of people, but rather to their common sense. It should not and cannot rationally have a place in politics. There is no need of a separate party to vindicate its merits or to force it upon public attention. As Bishop Merrill well says:

"Constitutional provisions should never be made the basis of party organizations. The organic law of the State and the North aught to have the support of the patriotic citizens in all parties. The only way to secure this end is to avoid thrusting platforms into the constitution. Prohibition of the liquor traffic cannot be permanent till it is in the constitution and it cannot go into the constitution as a party measure. It is too broad for party. Like the fundamental principles of the government, it must be the common ground of the better classes and parties; like the common school system, it touches interests too vital to the common weal to be made the football of politicians. Parties divide on interpretation of the constitution itself. Interpretations from politics and party issues relate to politics. But there is a realism of principle beyond the conflicts of parties where the moral character of the government rests upon the foundation of right—where the enduring elements of Christian civilization crystallize in organic law—and that broader realm of essential right this question of prohibition must come."

Plantation Philosophy.

De man what tells de truf wid er effort is nine times outen ten er easy liar

De eye often misleads people. De hawk's got a better eye den de game rooster.

Yer can impose har'er enemy an' be doan' think much erbout it, but when yer imposes on er dear frien' he is dun wid yer fur life.

Er man may larn ter lub er 'oman, but er chile kain larn ter lub his fodder an' mudder. Ef de lub ain't born dar it ain't gwine ter come.

De wildes' man sometimes becomes de quietest citizen. Dar ain't nothin more skittish den a young deer, but once ketch him an' he is de easies' thing in de worl' ter tame.

It 'pears dat all through life de hardest thing ter do is de bes' arter it am done. It takes de hardes' sorter work ter split er knotty piece o' wood, but arter it is split it makes de bes' fire.

Some chillun kaint be teached how to be berhabe dareselves. Yer may take de wile turkey's aigs an' hatch 'em out in'er de tamest turkey in de lan', but jes az soon ez de young ones gits big enuff, da rize an' fly erway.

GEORGE M. BALL, a young man of eighteen years, employed on the farm of Mr. Perry, has been accustomed to drink, while milking night and morning, a quantity of warm milk. A few mornings since, he failed to take his accustomed draught, something came up in his throat choking him and he fell over senseless. A son of Mr. Perry was surprised to see a snake's head protruding from Mr. Ball's mouth, but on attempting to seize it, the serpent retreated down his throat. A powerful emetic was administered and in a short time the young man vomited up a "hooked adder," two feet and eight inches long, and about as thick as two fingers of a man's hands. It lived only five minutes. Ball has probably carried the serpent for at least twelve years, as he was accustomed to drink from a brook when a small boy. Since parting from his tenant his health has greatly improved and his appetite is a little more reasonable.—Snow Hill Shield.

IN a letter to Gov. Lloyd, written before the recent decision of Judge Irving, Attorney-General Roberts contends that the oyster-carrying license should be enforced until finally passed upon by the court of appeals.

W. REGISTER'S
MARBLE WORKS!

[NEXT DOOR TO THE MARKET HOUSE, CHESTERTOWN.]

I Challenge the United States to produce better marble or finer finished work than I have done at my Yard. I guarantee its durability. You can see for yourselves in all your Cemeteries or in my Yard. I work no Scraps that have been thrown away by the saw-yards. I work no Pennsylvania marble; it will not stand the weather. I keep no agent out to torment. Persons know when they want and they had better look at the stone before buying—go look through your Cemeteries and see the broken and defaced stone. If you want a good and lasting Tombstone or Cottage Monument or a Shaft Monument of any size, I have the Largest Finished Stock of Marble on this Shore, and I will not be outdone in Prices. Call and examine for yourself. Respectfully, aug15-tf. W. REGISTER.
