SATURDAY MORNING..........Nov. 21, 1885.

The Andre Monument Incident.

On the night of the election in New York the monument erected at Tappan to the memory of Major Andre by Mr. Cyrus W. Field was blown up with dynamite. The work was so completely done that both bases of the monument were shattered to atoms, and the iron fencing that enclosed it completely demolished. Mr. Field was evidently under the impression that the traditional hatred of the traitor Arnold had died out, or that at least there had grown up with the lapse of years a sentiment of pity for Arnold's victim. Every school boy knows the story of Arnold's treason; how at a critical period in the war of the revolution he entered into negotiations with Sir Henry Clinton for the surrender of West Point, which is the key to the Hudson river, and how Major Andre, Clinton's adjutant-general, undertook the perilous task of passing through the American lines in disguise to confer with Arnold at a point agreed upon, on the banks of the Hudson for the purpose of making the final arrangements for taking possession of the fortress. The interview was held, but while returning to New York, where the headquarters of Sir Henry Clinton then were, Andre was intercepted near Tappan by three American militiamen—Paulding, Williams and Van Wert—and made a prisoner, notwithstanding his efforts to bribe them to let him pass. Papers were found secreted on his person which revealed the treason of Arnold, who, getting wind of Andre's arrest, succeeded in making his escape into the British lines. Andre was tried by court-martial as a spy and condemned to be hung, although he petitioned to be shot. Washington, who pitied the fate of the brilliant young soldier, reluctantly agreed that the sentence of the court should be carried out, but not until he had made many efforts to capture Arnold, which, if they had been successful, might have enabled him to modify the sentence of Andre, although the example set by Sir William Howe in causing Nathan Hale to be hung as a spy during the first year of the war broke the force of Clinton's appeal to Washington to spare Andre's life. Wearing the full uniform of a British officer, Andre was hung on October 2, 1780, at Tappan, in the presence of a large detachment of troops and an immense concourse of people, and it was the testimony of the American officers, to whom, during his brief captivity, he had endeared himself by the sweetness of his disposition and the charm of his conversation and manners, that he died bravely. Nathan Hale, although surrounded by no such manifestations of sympathy, also died as bravely as Andre. He had passed, at the instance of Washington, in disguise through the British lines, and like Andre, was bringing back with him full drawings and memoranda of all the information Washington desired to obtain, when he was captured and ordered to be executed the next morning. He was but twenty-one years old, but when standing on the platform of the gallows he said, with his last breath, "I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country." That patriotic sentence has made his name and his fate memorable in history. Andre was buried at Tappan, but in 1821 his remains were removed to England and interred in Westminister Abbey, where a handsome memorial was erected to his memory.

Ice-Houses on the Farm.

One of our agricultural exchanges, speaking on this subject, says: It is hard to understand why more farmers have not ice-houses. It is a significant fact that wherever a farmer has built an ice-house he has not allowed it to be unused or to fall into decay. After a man has once had his harvest drink—water, tea and milk—cooled, he is not apt to subject himself to warm drinks again. Ice-water is to be condemned; but water cooled by ice is as much more wholesome than warm water as it is more palatable. The coolness imparted by ice adds as much to the palatableness and wholesomeness of food as it does to drink. Ice not only preserves and increases the palatableness of butter, but loss of sweetness certainly indicates loss of wholesomeness; and so with meats and fruits. Ice keeps meat from tainting, thereby keeping it wholesome as well as toothsome. The farmer cannot go to the market every morning and purchase fresh meat, and he cannot keep meat in summer without ice; therefore the farmer without an ice-house must eat salt pork during hot weather, and that is just what a large majority of us do. Ice will often save meats, vegetables and fruits from spoiling outright. An ice-house robs the swill-barrel, but how much it saves for the table is hard to be realized without the aid of practical experience.

The Ancient and the Modern Ark.

The following figures concerning the Great Eastern and the Ark are of interest. Somebody is comparing the size and cost of the Great Eastern and Noah's Ark. The cost of building and launching the Great Eastern was $3,650,000, and this broke the original company. A new company was formed, which spent $600,000 in fitting and furnishing her. Then this company failed, and a new company was organized, with a capital of $500,000. A the close of 1880 this company sank £86,715 upon the vessel, thus making her total cost $4,703,575. Nothing ever built can stand comparison with the Great Eastern, excepting Noah's Ark, and even this vessel could not match her. The length of the Ark was 300 cubits, her breadth 50 cubits, and her height 30 cubits. The cubit of the Scriptures, according to Bishop Wilkins, was 21.65 in., and, computed into English measurement, the Ark was 547 ft. long, 91 ft. beam, 54.7 ft. depth, and 21,762 tons. The Great Eastern is 680 ft. long, 83 ft. beam, 56 ft. depth, and 28,093 tons measurement. So Noah's Ark is quite overshadowed by the Great Eastern.

DON'T FRIGHTEN THE CHILDREN.—A man named W. L. Clemens, of North Carolina, went with his wife and children a few weeks ago to Charleston, S. C., to live. Last Sunday night he had a sad experience which should be remember by all parents as a warning. The story is told by the Greenville News, which says: "Clemens and his wife wished to go to church. A little son 5 years old, who had always slept with his parents, was put to bed with an older brother in anticipation of their leaving the family room dark. He objected and cried incessantly. The father threatened to lock him up in a dark room if he did not hush, knowing that the child was morbidly afraid of darkness when alone. The little fellow cried louder than before, and the threat was put into execution. On being locked in the dark room the child gave three piercing screams and fainted. On coming to it was discovered that the once bright and promising boy had become an imbecile."

THE silver question excites an interest in England even keener, perhaps, than in this country. The London World, commenting on the fact that money was going a-begging at three-quarters per cent. per annum is an evidence of the prostration of business, declares that the paralysis of industrial enterprise was due to the steady decline in prices. The cause, it says, —is simply the disturbance of the currency legislation of the whole civilized world at a time of a diminished production of gold. The demonetization of silver has virtually destroyed part of the wealth of mankind. An immense amount of silver which might be profitably employed in facilitating business exchanges, is now lying useless in the vaults of banks and financial institutions. The world is afraid to coin more silver, because this metal has depreciated. Meanwhile the depreciation increases day by day, because the world is thus afraid. Restore the position of silver, and the strain on gold will at once cease and matters mend.

THE apple crop this year in the State of New York as well as in several of the New England States is estimated the largest yield ever known. The fruit is of excellent quality. The average price is about $1 35 a barrel. Out of this has to come the price of the barrel, leaving the net price of the fruit about $1 a barrel. Many persons are holding their fruit for a rise in prices, and the storehouses are full. The splendid yield of apples will fully compensate for the loss of the potato crop, which is practically a failure.

AN exchange gives the following: "Step right into the parlor and make yourself at home," said the nine-year-old son of the editor to his sister's best young man. "Take the rocking chair and help yourself to the album. Helen Louise is up stairs, and won't be down for some time yet—has to make up her form before going to press."
