Vol. 46. CHESTERTOWN, MD., SATURDAY, DEC. 26, 1885. No. 34.

To Tax Payers.

PAY YOUR TAXES!

AS COLLECTOR of the Fourth Election District I have my tax books in hand, and bills made out against each individual tax-payer. I am prepared to receive taxes for the year.

To accommodate tax-payers I will be at the Register's office in Chestertown every SATURDAY and TUESDAY afternoon.

Prompt payments are requested, so that I may not be embarrassed and saved the unpleasant necessity of forcing collections.

GEORGE S. BIDDLE,
aug22-tf. Collector 4th District.

TO SECOND DISTRICT TAX-PAYERS.

TAXES are now all due, and I am compelled to settle with the State and individual claimants. I have no option in the matter. I must pay or be sued. Therefore, tax-payers must pay me or I must proceed to collect the same according to law. This is positive and will admit of no delay and those desiring to avoid unpleasant legal proceedings can do so only by immediate payment of their taxes before January 1, 1886.

On Saturday, Dec. 26, I will be at Kennedyville; Monday, 28th, at Lynch's; Tuesday, 29th, at Chestertown; Wednesday, 30th, Chesterville, and Thursday, the 31st, at Still Pond.

SAMUEL COMEGYS,
dec5-5t. Collector 2d District.

A Word to the Wise About Taxes!

THE MAN—or woman either—who pays his taxes most promptly, is the most happy. He has relieved himself of a burden that increases in weight the longer it is borne; costs and interest are added and the tax-payer feels justified in blaming everybody and everything for the results of his own negligence. Therefore, be wise and happy—PAY YOUR TAXES at once—out of your Wheat or Peach money and don't wait for corn or uncertain collections.

To accommodate payers I will be in Chestertown every Tuesday and Wotton Station every Saturday afternoon.

I have my books now in hand and your bills are ready. Resp'y, aug22-tf. JAS. S. GEMMILL.

FIFTH DISTRICT, ATTENTION!

'Come, let us Reason Together!'

AS citizens we desire to have good roads—we wish to attract visitors and strangers; as good and charitable people we want to make the poor comfortable; to secure peace and order it is needful to have efficient officers. Your boys and girls must be educated. All these things need money—it is indispensable. The Tax Books are now ready, and to facilitate the payment of your taxes I will be at

ROCK HALL at 10 A. M., GREY'S INN 12 M., and EDESVILLE at 3 P. M.,

First and Third Wednesdays in each month.

At LANKFORD and KILBURN the 2d and 4th Monday in each month

I shall be pleased to meet all my friends with their pockets full of current coin of the County, State and Nation as above appointed.

JAMES THOS. LAMB, Coll'r.
aug8.tf. 5th District.

We have just received our Annual

LETTER FROM KRIS KINGLE

and we have had it printed in order that you may know just what OLD KRIS is intending to do for you. You are well aware that our store is the place where Old Kris gets the pretty things to put in your stockings on Christmas Eve; so you must read the following letter

From Old Kris to his friend Cummings:

KRIS KINGLE CASTLE,
Nov. 24, 1885.

My Dear Old Friend Cummings:—As usual I address my annual letter to you. You know that only once a year I am enabled to write you for want of time, and I write you now because I must pay your beautiful town my Christmas visit for the purpose of distributing to all the children the many pretty things that I shall get at your store, for I know you always have them, and the fact is I have in the past been so well pleased with your selection that I shall not bring anything with me this season, but get all at your store. Please answer at your earliest convenience and tell me what you have in stock to select from. Of course I expect to have my old quarters at your store. I shall be down a few days before Christmas, so that I can have plenty of time to look over your stock.

Very truly, yours. KRIS KINGLE.

Reply from Cummings

CHESTERTOWN, MD., Nov. 28, 1885.

My Dear Old Friend Kris:—Your letter was duly received, and, believe me, I was delighted to hear from you, and to know that you had not forgotten us. Of course, you can have your old quarters at our store and I am glad to say that I have the largest collection for you to select from I have ever had, including all the newest and prettiest things that could be found. You have no need to bring anything with you for you will find all you want here. We have Dolls of all sizes and some of them have the prettiest faces you ever saw, also Express Wagons, Sleds, Barrows, Rocking Horses, Doll Coaches, Trimmings for Christmas Trees, Whips, Horns, Drums, Dishes, Doll Houses, all kinds of Animals, and in fact everything ever found in a toy store, and we have tons of Candy of the finest kind as well as cheap Candies, also Raisins, Figs, Dates, Oranges, Apples, Lemons and Nuts. I can't begin to tell you half but come along and we will give you a fine reception.

Yours truly, CUMMINGS & CO.

[FOR THE KENT NEWS.]

Jesus Christ of Bethlehem.

Go where you may,
They have a Day
In every land beneath the sun,
When folks turn out,
Rejoice and shout,
And children have a world of fun.
Here South and North
Observe the Fourth—
The Fourth Day of July for them!—
But all the earth
Observe the birth
Of Jesus Christ of Bethlehem.

This sight is grand!
The nations stand
Upon their feet, and there confess
Him Lord of all,
Both great and small,
And King of peace and righteousness.
On every shore
O, what a roar
Of joy for Him who came for them!
The Virgin born
Who came this morn
To sweet, enchanting Bethlehem.

Is there a man
This day who can
Not join with us right joyfully?
And who will fail
The Babe to hail
As Christ—the Lord of land and sea?—
The God who swung
The orbs along
And made the voids of space for them.—
Upon the earth
His glorious birth
Occurred this day at Bethlehem.

With all our might
We'll all unite,
And raise one universal shout;
While floods of peace
And righteousness
From every swelling heart gush out.
Arise!—Awake!
Let all partake
Of happiness prepared for them.—
Hail Christ this morn,
Of Mary born
On the old hills of Bethlehem.

Let every sail
Swept by the gale
Around the girdle of the sea.—
Let every race
Upon the face
Of earth rejoice with you and me.
Beneath the sun
Let's all be one
In Him sprung of the line of Shem;
Let's all take hold;
Let's be enrolled
In Union over Bethlehem.

All in a flame
The angels came;
The joyful shepherds found their way.
The wise men too
Around to view
The Star of Love's Eternal Day;
The Prophets old
Had long foretold
The Seion in the line of Shem.—
Salvation's sweet!
Let's forth and greet
The Rising Sun of Bethlehem!

JOHN B. SCOTT, Washington, D. C.

PASTEUR'S HYDROPHOBIA CURE.

What It Is.

We noticed in the NEWS two weeks ago the fact that four children bitten by a mad dog in Newark, N. J., had been sent to Paris to be treated by M. Pasteur. The Scientific American has the following reference to the subject:

Besides the humane sympathy which their condition has excited, there is a strong scientific interest attached to these cases.

About 50 per cent. of the people who are bitten by mad dogs, and whose wounds are cauterized, develop hydrophobia. The dogs bitten by the rabid beast have been secured, and their subsequent behavior will probably add another proof to a case of genuine rabies in the aggressor.

The operation of inoculation consists simply in injecting virus under the skin by means of a hypodermic syringe. Ordinarily it produces no illness or unpleasant results of any kind.

The first step in the preparation of the virus used in this operation is the inoculation of a rabbit with a fragment of tissue taken from the spine of a rabid dog. The hydrophobia microbes contained in this tissue by introduction beneath the skin of the animal or preferably into its brain, penetrate the entire system and communicate the disease. The animal becomes mad. The inoculation of the poison occupies fifteen days. As soon as death occurs, a portion of the spinal marrow of this diseased rabbit is introduced into the system of a second rabbit; from the second rabbit, matter is taken with which a third rabbit is inoculated; and the process is continued until sixty animals in all have been treated. The power of the hydrophobia virus increases with each inoculatinn, so that the last incubation of the sixty operations occupies but seven days. On the other hand, the power of the virus is diminished by dried air, so that different degrees of strength are obtained by keeping the spinal marrow of the inoculated rabbits in bottles of dried air. In beginning his treatment, therefore, M. Pasteur inoculates the patient with old tissue, the strength of which has been attenuated by the action of the dry air.

Gradually the strength of the virus is increased until at the last injection, at the end of about a fortnight, the tissue employed has been bottled only two days. The period of incubation of the last inoculation does not exceed a week, but the system of the patient has been brought to such a condition that it could receive such powerful virus without injury. This treatment not only prevents the development of rabies in the patient, but as M. Pasteur assures them, it gives ample protection against the attacks of any other mad dogs for a year at least.

In almost all cases, M. Pasteur's treatment has been successful. He has recently inoculated three children who came to him from Algeria, two months after having been bitten. They have now returned to their homes and are in perfect health, though the death of one of their comrades before they started for Paris gave unmistakable evidence that the dog was rabid. It may, of course, be possible that the virus of the mad dog did not reach the two children who are living. There are at present no less than sixty-two persons under treatment by M. Pasteur, for hydrophobia. One patient, a young girl, who was bitten by a mad dog and subsequently inoculated, has died of rabies; but as thirty-six days had elapsed before she was operated upon, the period of incubation had expired and the treatment came too late. Though this case shows the necessity of prompt action, it does not detract from the value of the system, although an unbeliever might say, perhaps, it was the treatment that caused the death.

The introduction of M. Pasteur's system in America would seem to be desirable. It would involve the establishment of rabbit farms in various parts of the country, where the animals would be kept constantly inoculated with the disease. It is a suggestion not unworthy the attention of the present administration that the government shall lend its assistance in the matter.

Proposed a Compromise.

Texas Siftings.

Sam Johnsing has been suspected of stealing dogs in order to obtain a reward. A conversation he had with Judge Pennybunker encourages the idea that he is not too honest.

"Ef a man was ter steal dat fine pointer dog ob yourn, how much reward would you gib ter git him back, jedge?"

"About five dollars."

"Boss, gimme four dollars and I'll jess luff dat dog alone. Dem am special rates which I ain't offering de general public. Dar's a circus a-coming, and I'st got ter hab money."

Wigfall's Wit.

Detroit Free Press.

On the collapse of the rebellion ex-Senator Wigfall fell in with a party of Union soldierz in Texas. Being well disguised, he entered freely into conversation with the soldiers of the guard, in the course of which he asked what they would do with old Wigfall if they were to catch him.

"We would hang him certain," was the reply.

"Serve him right," replied Wigfall. "If I were with you I should be pulling at the end of the rope myself."

Tired of the Bench.

"Yes, I think I shall retire. I have been 35 years on the bench." "You must have been able to save considerable money after so long and so honorable a career." "No, I have not. You see there isn't as much money in shoemaking as there used to be."—Puck.

"Do you be too emphatic in the expression of your opinion, my son. I once heard your mother speak of the Biggses as the 'scum of the earth.' Since then the 'scum' has risen, as it always does, first or last, and will have nothing to do with your mother or me."

PATCHED ELBOWS.

"Look, mother, those interesting elbows are out again! I don't know what old Toppleton will say."

As he spoke, Dave Baldwin turned about and showed his mother the rents where two very active elbows had worked themselves out of the prison. Mrs. Baldwin was frying griddle-cakes for Dave's breakfast. She looked up and said in her pleasant way:

"Well, Dave, the thing that made the trouble will cure it. Work did it, and work will cure it, and next month you will be able from your earnings to have a new coat, so that again you can say, what made holes will cover them. In a few minutes I will sew up those holes."

"Sorry to make you so much trouble mother. I'm an awful boy."

Thereupon Mother Baldwin told him she would stop his mouth with a griddle-cake if he did not stop that style of talking.

"I shouldn't object mother to looking as well as Frank Thompson."

"I should if I thought you got your clothes the same way. I was at the Thompsons the other day, and Mrs. Thompson groaned and said she should be glad when Frank got his bills paid, but clerks must dress in any store, she supposed. Before you and Frank went into Toppleton's store you and he were glad to pick greens in the city lots and bring them home for dinner, and I would rather you'd be a little dandelion-picker for life, rather than having you owing everybody and never paying them."

To this sentiment Mother Baldwin gave emphasis by the vigorous landing of another griddle-cake on Dave's plate.

"I think young people ought to grow up with a horror of debt, for it is one kind of dishonesty if you owe people, because you have bought something you know you may not pay for. Then, if you expect when you buy to be able to pay, but still don't pay, and so keep people out of their just due, after awhile conscience gets easy on this debt subject, and says: 'Oh, any time will do,' and who knows? If I get easy about what I owe a man, I may get easy on the subject of taking something outright from him. No, Dave, I want to bring you up right."

Still again did Mother Baldwin give emphasis to her words by the prompt and hearty lading of a griddle-cake on the hungry boy's plate.

"That's good mother. You give 'em big an' hot. I'll promise to be honest."

"If you don't young man," said Mother Baldwin, with a ringing laugh, "you may speak for another cook. The very first evening I possibly can, I will engage to cover those active elbows with two as neat patches as I can put on. They will do till you can buy a new coat."

Dave and Frank that morning walked together to Toppleton's "Dry Goods Bazar," where they were clerks.

"Oh, that is a beauty!" exclaimed Dave, noticing one of Frank's sleeve-buttons. The style was that of a blue stone in a cross form, set within a rich gold band.

"Like it?" asked Frank. "The ladies all think it very fine. When I sell 'em a piece of silk, I just carelessly lay my hand on it and say: 'It shows well against jewelry,' and it is just—just—irresistible."

"Must have cost something."

"Hem—well? Taint paid for yet, but that is all right. By wearing it I'm advertising jewelry for the firm where I got it, and that is pay."

"Don't know about it, but seems to me I feel easier when I pay for a thing."

"Oh, nonsense," replied Frank, sharply. He did not wish to be reminded of the subject of debt, and why should his old companion in days of dandelion picking worry him with his sensitive conscience?

That night Dave's mother covered his "enterprising elbows" with two very neat patches. Only a pair of sharp eyes would have detected these honest covers.

"Say, Dave," said Frank, the next day, eyeing closely his fellow-clerk, "are those patched elbows paid for?"

"Patched elbows?" asked Jim Blake, a clerk with a rough voice. "Paid for? Has Dave any strange notions about the subject of debt?"

"Yes," said Dave, coolly and pleasantly, "and I am not ashamed of them, or my clothes either."

"Indeed!" said Frank, contemptuously.

"Come, boys! Attend to your work!" exclaimed a voice.

The clerks all looked up. It was Toppleton himself. There was an awful silence in that part of the store.

"Guess I made a mistake," exclaimed Frank. "I'll look out for the old man next time."

A very serious mistake, that night, Toppleton thought that night somebody was making. Almost all his clerks had left. Chancing to look out of his counting-room he saw an arm that, reaching around the corner of a set of shelves on which were expensive broadcloths, abstracted a fragment and then was quickly withdrawn.

"Indeed!" thought Toppleton. "That was a neat operation. Look here! What did I see on that arm, or that wrist rather? Something blue? Humph!"

The next day the clerks wondered why Toppleton seemed to be bowing so much when near them, stooping down to the level of their hands.

"Funny," said Jim Blake, "I thought Toppleton would turn cannibal and eat my hands today."

"I thought he was going off with my sleeve-buttons," remarked Frank. "He said they were a pretty pattern, and eyed them covetously."

Toppleton himself said: "If that thief is round tonight fishing cloth off from that shelf, he may have an unexpected bite."

That night when almost all the clerks had left the store, that same arm began to slyly fish round the corner of the shelves on which were sorted the expensive cloths, and there was indeed an "unexpected bite." It was vigorously grappled by some body hidden under the counter. When the "fisherman" and his "game" were brought face to face, Frank Thompson saw Toppleton on the end of his line! It was the last day that Frank had a chance to "fish" or do any work in Toppleton's store.

The next evening Dave Baldwin said to his mother: "I am sorry to report that my elbows show a rent, not in the patches, but one side."

"Don't you worry. I saw it was giving way when I put the patches on, but I couldn't mend it then. I'll slip a needle through it in a jiffy. Let me take it now."

"What shall I put on?"

"On—oh—throw on my sack, if you can't do better. You needn't be ashamed of it. It's paid for," said the debt-hating mother.

"Good evening."

It was a man's voice. In astonishment Dave and Mother Baldwin looked up.

"Excuse me. You did not seem to hear my rap at the front door, and as it was open I thought I would step in and rap here — but excuse me."

"It's Toppleton whispered Dave. "Dear me! Dear me! Let me get behind you! No I won't! Then Dave came forward boldly and manfully, arrayed in his mother's sack!

"Mother, this is Mr. Toppleton. Excuse my looks, I—I—"

"Fact is, Mr. Tappleton, I was just mending his coat, and he—he—"

"Oh, no apologies, madam," said Mr. Toppleton, grinning and rubbing his hands. "I couldn't help hearing you say it was paid for, and that is not a bad motto to follow — to pay for what you buy as soon as possible. I wish one of my clerks had followed that rule; but I suppose you know about it and I won't say anything more on that point. I came to say that I thought young David was a trusty boy, and I would like to promote him. There is an open place in a higher department, and he is welcome to it."

The next day Dave took his new position in the store. Various explanations were given by his fellow-clerks.

"There," said Jim Blake, "I can explain it all. It is owing to the fact that Toppleton heard our talk in the store about 'patched elbows.' I mean to put
