SATURDAY MORNING .....JAN. 2, 1886.

WHY "FARMING DON'T PAY."

ESSAY BY A WORTON GENTLEMAN BEFORE THE KENT COUNTY AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATION.

The following is the address or essay given by a member of the Kent County Agricultural Association at a recent meeting:

MR. PRESIDENT:—The club will not expect from me an elaborate disquisition on purely technical points in the science of agriculture. I merely give a few plain facts which I believe explains the want of success in many instances. On every hand the cry comes, "Farming does not pay." If we have good crops the consequence is we get small prices. We either have too many peaches or not enough. It appears to be human nature to complain.

Now, it does seem that the occupation which God himself selected for man would be of all others the most profitable. If it be not so the fault must be with the man. How few farmers keep any account with their farms, or with any particular crop or stock. He plants his corn, sows his wheat—so many bushels to the acre as his drill represents—makes no distinction between small and large grain, never measures his land, puts so many bushels of fertilizer to the acre whether it be dry or wet, cannot tell from one year to another how much he sowed on a certain field; to all appearances "he goes it blind." Then the cry comes, "Farming does not pay."

A farmer will go to a public sale and buy an animal that is of inferior breed in preference to buying one of good stock from his neighbor, and why? Because he gets nine months credit and one year at law, and when it comes time for them to give their increase lets them shift for themselves. Another great drawback to the farmer will be found to result from useless expenditures at home. Expenses to answer the demands of fashion—and what people may have to say of them. At the end of the year his stock and farm has not come up to his expectations, and then the cry comes, "Farming is a failure!"

He keeps no books, has no account of his household or personal expenses, but leaves that to the merchant with whom he deals, takes no account of the many conveniences he has around him, he has his horse and carriage to go when it suits him, raises a family of children, educates them, enjoys a social evening with his neighbor, is not troubled with going to market every morning to get his vegetables for the use of the family; yet he gives the farm no credit. I think that if every farmer kept an account of all his expenditures and all his assets they would find that farming was the most independent life that a man could live.

Another difficulty with the farmer is his labor and want of personal attention to it. When he goes to hire a man to work on the farm he does not ask us to his qualification to perform any particular branch of farming, but what wages he wants, or what Mr. A or B has offered him? Now, I think a laborer ought to be required to give a recommendation from his former employer as to his qualification to perform that which he proposes to do. I think that a laborer ought to be paid according to his qualifications. A farmer will not employ one that has served say seven years to learn his trade because he wants one dollar and fifty cents a day, but will take a man that just picked up his hatchet and saw because he can get him for less, when he will out of every hundred feet of lumber used cut twenty-five feet to waste, to say nothing about the time taken up in loafing, and when the job is done it is a botch. Then comes the cry, "Farming is poor business."

Another great difficulty with most farmers is the want of confidence in each other. They will not work together. One will overbid or underbid his brother farmer in the hiring of labor and in many other ways. Merchants, mechanics and professional men have their unions, but with the exception of a club like this, here and there, throughout the counties, the farmer is the most of all others isolated. Men find that in union there is strength and when farmers have failed to make that discovery they have been sure to make another, and that is farming does not pay. And why? Because vast fortunes are not made in a few years, then the cry comes that it is a poor pitiful business and does not pay.

It does not pay a discontented man; it does not pay an avaricious man; it does not pay one whose idea of payment is the immediate acquisition of immense wealth. But it does pay in health; it pays in the certainty of a solid substance and above all others in the satisfaction of seeing his work prosper in his hands and that he is filling nobly the sphere in which the Creator has placed him and that no one in the world is the worse off for his being in it.

Wise Words.

Flattery is like cologne water—to be smelt of, not swallowed.

Credit is an enemy to entice you to buy what you don't want.

A great deal of talent is lost to the world for want of a little courage.

Habits have more force in forming our characters than our opinions have.

Look after the establishment of a worthy character, and leave its appreciation to others.

Those who think money will do anything may be suspected of doing anything for money.

Concentration is the secret of strength in politics, in war, in trade—in short, in all management of human affairs.

We are sent into this world to make it better and happier; and in proportion as we do so we make ourselves both.

At least nine-tenths of those most successful in business, start in life without any reliance except upon their head and hands.

There is no degree or merit so high as to place man beyond the reach of temptation or to prevent him from raising still higher.

A good man and a wise man may at times be angry with the world, and at times grieved at it; but no man is ever discontented with the world if he does his duty in it.

Genius without religion is only a lamp on the outer gate of a palace. It may serve to cast a gleam of light on those that are without, while the inhabitant sits in darkness.

The only cure for selfishness is sacrifice; the only cure for unbelief is to shake off the ague of doubt by doing your conscience's bidding; the only cure for timidity is to plunge into some dreaded duty before the chill comes on.

HIGH GRADE BONE FERTILIZERS.
We take pleasure in again calling the attention of farmers to our High Grade Fertilizers. It being eight years ago this spring since they were first offered to consumers under their present form; and from that time until now there has been an increasing demand for them, which is a far better testimonial to us than any letters of praise could be, although we do not want for these latter, as we are in receipt of many. It has been our aim to put up the best fertilizers we know how, and the results in the field clearly show that we have hit the mark right in the bull's eye, and we believe if consumers will take our target (American Brand, bull's head) they will get a good result every time—the bull's eye, if their aim is good.
THEIR CHARACTER.
The main characteristic of our fertilizers is that they are prepared with particular reference to the crop, and not to a chemical analysis; the latter does very well in its place, and we believe in chemistry thoroughly, but consumers are too often deceived with the idea that a chemical analysis is the main thing, and if they get a good analysis and high commercial valuation as figured out with arbitrary prices by the chemist, they must have a fine fertilizer. Now it may happen that a fertilizer, with a commercial valuation of $25 00 per ton, will give a better result on the crop than one with a valuation of $40 00 as based on a chemical analysis. And why should this be? Only because the material used in the one valued at $25 00 was better adapted to the crop than the other.
THEY ARE UNIFORM.
The goods we manufacture are uniform in composition, and are only varied in proportions, year after year, as we believe it to be an advantage to the crop. We have such large supplies of Bone, Blood, etc., from the slaughter establishments of New York, that our fertilizers are largely composed of these, and there is not that inducement for us to use cheaper material, that there might be, if we did not have this material.
BONE FERTILIZERS.
Our products are of a bone base, because we believe that is the most satisfactory source of phosphoric acid, and the large amount of animal matter our fertilizers contain makes them especially valuable in what may be considered the off or poor seasons. Some years it is noticed that almost any fertilizer will give fairly good results, but we find themost favorable comparisons for our products are in he poor years.
