To J. H. B. Latrobe

Dear Sir

I send you an account of money received from a few of the Churches visited by me the past Spring. I have been discouraged yea more — mortified that so little fruit has, to this time, come from my arduous labor. The plan of personal intercourse with Ministers and others on the subject of aiding your State, was not adopted without full deliberation, and the advice of Dr Alexander, and other friends.

The reception given to your agent, and the interest manifested by clergymen & others, in behalf of your Society and its noble efforts, led me to expect great results. The promises made by these men have not yet been fulfilled, except in few very few, cases. Whether they have forgotten their pledges, or as yet have been unable to meet them, remains to be seen. I do hope that their collections will yet be handed in. In fact, I know that in some cases collections, have been taken, and not yet sent to me.
