SATURDAY MORNING..... Feb. 20, 1886.

A Woman's Or's.

"Men work from morn till set of sun," They do,
"But a woman's work is never done." Quite true,
For when one task is finished, something is found
Awaiting a beginning, all year around.
Whether it be
To draw the tea,
Or bake the bread,
Or make the bed,
Or ply the broom,
Or dust the room,
Or floor to scrub,
Or knives to rub,
Or table set,
Or meals to get,
Or sheives to scan,
Or fruits to can,
Or seeds to sow,
Or plants to grow,
Or linens bleach,
Or butter churn,
Or jackets turn,
Or polish glass,
Or plate or brass,
Or cloth dress to mend,
Or children tend,
Or note indite,
Or stories write—
But I must stop, for really if I should
Name all the or's take me a day it would,
So many are they that I do declare
More boats than I could count might have a pair,
And yet enough be left. And men-folks, these
Same or's propel your barks o'er household seas
Into snug havens where you rest at ease.
And, one word more, don't you forget it please.

GRANT'S COURTSHIP.

The departure of his regiment to Louisiana in consequence of the agitation over the annexation of Texas having hastened matters, he says:

I immediately procured a horse and started for the country, taking no baggage with me, of course. There is an insignificant creek—the Gravois—between Jefferson barracks and the place to which I was going, and at that day there was not a bridge over it from its source to its mouth. There is not water enough in the creek at ordinary stages to run a coffeemill, and at low water there is none running whatever. On this occasion it had been raining heavily, and, when the creek was reached, I found the banks full to overflowing and the current rapid. I looked at it a moment to consider what to do. One of my superstitions had always been when I started to go anywhere, or to do anything, not to turn back, or stop until the thing intended was accomplished. I have frequently started to go to places where I had never been and to which I did not know the way, depending upon making inquiries on the road, and if I got past the place without knowing it, instead of turning back, I would go on until a road was found turning in the right direction, take that and come in by the other side. So I struck into the stream, and in an instant the horse was swimming and I being carried down by the current. I headed the horse toward the other bank and soon reached it, wet through and without other clothes on that side of the stream. I went on, however, to my destination and borrowed a dry suit from my—future—brother-in-law. We were not of the same size, but the clothes answered every purpose until I got more of my own.

Before I returned I mustered up courage to make inquiries in the most awkward manner imaginable the discovery I had made on learning that the Fourth Infantry had been ordered away from Jefferson barracks. The young lady afterwards admitted that she, too, although until then she had never looked upon me other then a visitor whose company was agreeable to her, had experienced a depression of spirits she could not account for when the regiment left. Before separating it was definitely understood that at a convenient time we would join our fortunes and not let the removal of a regiment trouble us.

NOT TAKING RISKS.

"You say you live with your parents," said a china dealer who was putting a lot of youngsters through a "civil-service" examination for the position of errand boy in his establishment.

"Yessir."

"And you are quick at figures?"

"Yessir."

"Now, suppose I had dropped around the corner to get lunch, and a lady should come along who wished to purchase two dozen cups and saucers at a dollar and a having a dozen."

"Yessir."

"After agreeing to take the goods she hands you a five-dollar note. How much change would you return to her?"

"Two dozen cups and saucers?" asked the boy, gazing toward the ceiling.

"That's what I said."

"She must be a bordin'-house keeper to—"

"Never mind what she is. How much change would you hand her?" asked the dealer.

"A dollar and a-half a dozen?"

"Yes, yes. Now then?"

"Don't you think that's pretty darn high at—"

"Never mind whether it's high or low. How much money would you return to the lady?"

"But them five dollars might be bad," ejaculated the boy, winking at the store cat.

"We will suppose the bill to be good," said the dealer, sharply.

"I don't see what one woman wants to buy all them cups and saucers for, anyway. When my sister got married she didn't set up housekeepin' with—"

"Then you can't give me the answer?"

"What, 'bout the change?"

"Yes, yes."

"Oh!"

"Come, what is the answer?"

"Well, marnured the boy, shifting to his other foot, and keeping an eye on the cat, "I'd just tell the lady to call 'round when you was in and get her change, fur the bill might be a bad un, and I don't never take no risks."

He was engaged at once.

A Richly-Dressed Swindler in the Central Police Court.

Philadelphia Times.

A large audience crowded into the hearing room at the Central Station yesterday afternoon to listen to the testimony of the many witnesses in the case of Lottie Sweigert, the pretty swindler, who was arrested on last Friday by Special Officers Hoffman and Keaton, of the Eigth district. The prisoner, who appeared to be greatly dejected, was the cynosure of the large and interested gathering, among which were many women. She appeared to keenly realize her position, as she frequently gave vent to her feelings in sobs and violent bursts of weeping. Philip Gilpin, employed by T. Smith & Son, jewelers, described how he had been relieved of two diamond rings and a gold-headed cane in a house at Marshall and Buttonwood streets, where he was taken by the woman, who received the goods and departed through the rear entrance, leaving him in the parlor until informed by a colored servant that the woman had gone and was a stranger to the inmates.

Samuel Davies, the prisoner's counsel, made an energetic but unsuccessful appeal for light bail. He claimed that his client was a kleptomaniac, when he was interrupted by Magistrate Smith, who said that her actions more strongly resembled those of a swindler. While the counselor was reforging in a feeling manner to the friendless and penniless condition of his client he turned to a witness, Mary J. Frey, and said in a dramatic way:

"Would you send this woman to jail for $1 worth of socks?"

The witness replied, laconically: "You didn't mind taking $25 from her to try and keep her out of jail."

The Court indulged in a roar of laughter and Miss Sweigert's bail was fixed at $2,800. She was sent to prison to await trial.

CLARA—"It's snowing splendidly. I trust we can have a sleigh-ride tomorrow."

Claude—"It will be on trust if we do."

STORIES OF THE WAR ILLUSTRATED IN EVERY ISSUE.

A Paper for the Homes of the Land—Sparkling and Original in Every Feature.

On the first of January, 1886, a new departure in every feature of the Weekly Times was made. Every number will be liberally illustrated in its War contributions, which have so long been a specialty in its columns, and in its Stories, which will be greatly enlarged from the pens of the best writers, and in Current History, Biography, Politics, Art, Science and the leading events of the day.

The time has passed for the weekly journal of the city to fill the place of the newspaper. The daily newspapers from the great centres of news now reach into every section of the land. Every inland city and every town of importance have their daily newspapers, and the local weekly, with the wonderful progress in provincial journalism, meets every want that the daily newspaper fails to supply. The metropolitan weekly of today must be much more than a newspaper; it must be a magazine of family reading; it must lead the magazine in popular literature, and it must meet every requirement of the intelligent reader of every class.

STORIES OF THE WAR

will be published in each number from the ablest writers who participated in the bloody drama of civil strife, and each will be profusely illustrated. The most entertaining and instructive Stories from the best writers of fiction will appear in each issue, with illustrations.

TERMS:

Sold by all news agents at five cents per copy. By mail, $2 per year, or $1 for six months. Clubs of ten $15, and an extra copy to getter up of the club.

☞ The Thursday afternoon trains will run Chestertown and other stations ONE HOUR EARLIER than schedule time during peach season.

Stations marked thus (*) have no agents. Freight for Bingham's and Nicholson's must be prepaid.

The morning trains make close connection at Clayton with trains on Delaware Railroad going North and South.

Passengers on morning train for Baltimore change cars at Wilmington.

Freight carried at low rates to all points and must be at Stations thirty minutes before starting time in order to insure despatch.

Excursion Tickets issued at reduced rates.
