MODERN SHAMS IN SOCIETY.

The Many Deceptions and the False Glitter Which it Contains.

Nothing is so clearly apparent to the intelligent observer of modern society as the many deceptions and the false glitter which it contains. There are social circles into which one may enter where the false and deceptive find no place, but these are in the minority. Glance at the average society of today, and there is but little in it that is really what one supposes it to be. How of is it that we find men and women carrying impressions of wealth and station far beyond their real income? Dignity is found to be only pretension; refinement, an artificial gloss; and intelligence but a verbal display. White satin dresses are worn where the plainest muslin is scarcely within the wearer's income; broadcloth, where the simplest business suit, if honestly paid for, would almost be a draft upon the revenue received. Flowers are worn in profusion, jewelry loaned and carriages hired by those to whom the acquirement of the necessities of daily life is a struggle.

Society, instead of being made a great compact designed to promote the good of man and woman, is used only as a cunning contrivance to palm off unreal virtues, and give to the unsophisticated, wrong and injurious impressions. Host and hostess share in the general deception with their guests, although neither is conscious of the other's deceit. The china on the table of the hostess is admired and its possessor envied by their guest, while the former in return is driven to maddening inward jealousy at the gorgeous garments of her guest. The guest knows not that the china is loaned, the hostess is ignorant of the unpaid bill of the dressmaker. The furniture, heavy portieres and expensive draperies are examined with admiration, and so fixed becomes the attention of the guest upon the embellishments of the home of her hostess that no room is left in her mind for a suspicion of a plan of purchase commonly known as the "instalment."

The young man with only a cursory knowledge of the cost of feminine apparel, regards what is only inexpensive silk or satin as the richest goods the market can afford. The young lady, in turn, silently calculates her chaperon's income by the flowers he sends, the liveried carriage in which he escorts her to the reception, and the full dress suit in which he is arrayed. Her untrained mind knows no existence of places where a lunch may be had by a modest indulgence in beverages, and establishments where clothing is sold for a night.

HER HUSBAND.

It is amusing and sometimes disgusting to hear women talk of relatives or friends as not being 'congenial.' A wife who makes such a declaration about her husband shows not only her poor taste, but a lack of discretion and good sense that is ominous for the future.

The degree of congeniality is never increased by such unwifely indiscretion.

"My husband's a real good man, a provider, as stingy as a clock, and all that, but in some things we ain't a bit congenial," said a garrulous woman to a friend.

"Upon what do you disagree?" was asked.

"Well, mostly about our reading."

"Why, how so?"

"Well, the fact is, I'm too literary for John."

"Indeed!"

"Yes, John ain't a bit literary. Now I always did run to literaryness. I just believe I could write."

"Did you ever try?"

"Yes, I've wrote two or three poems. They rhyme right straight through, but John laughs at me. He says that a woman with four children and only a poor carpenter for a husband ain't got time to be literary. There isn't the first literary streak in that man. Now, I'm the greatest reader."

"Does your husband dislike books."

"Oh, he likes to read the papers and says he thinks it his duty as a voter 'to keep informed in politics;' and he reads about the labor question, and he's got some old histories and a book called Macauley's Essays that he's forever reading. But when it comes to being literary John ain't there."

"What do you read?"

"Oh, I read every scrap of poetry in the newspapers I can pick up, and I often have four novels on hand at a time. I'm reading one now called Millicent the Mad Maid of the Mist, and I take four splendid story papers and borrow two more. I suppose may be I'd be happier if I wasn't so literary, but I can't help it."

"And, of course, John can't appreciate my bad tastes and my kind of reading. He ain't a bit congenial. And I sometimes think it would have been better for John if he'd married a woman less literary than me. I's dreadful to be so literary when your husband ain't a bit that way."

"Yes—dreadful for the husband."—Youth's Companion.

No Boiling, No Scalding Of Clothes.

OUR FORE-FATHERS SOAP

FAC-SIMILE OF THE LABEL ON THE WRAPPER.

Ask Your Grocer For It.

NO MORE A MYSTERY. WHY DOES THE CLOTHING TEAR SO EASILY? THE REASONS GIVEN.

ANSWER.—From the use of strong and impure Soap, made up in salable forms and shapes, with which the market is flooded. If you want to be right sure use ECKERS' OUR FOREFATHERS' SOAP—three connecting 4-inch cakes, making each bar one foot long; weight 22½ ounces—recommended by the Best Families, Hotels and Institutions throughout the country. It is prepared by the Grecian Purifying, Boiling and Settling Process, from fresh, clean and selected butchers' tallow. By its use you run no risk of contracting any skin disease; no stiffness of the arms or wrist. A great saving of time and labor. WASHING CLOTHES WITH OR WITHOUT BOILING OR SCALDING. You can use it as you wish, but to wash without boiling or scalding observe these directions: Take lukewarm water, rub with soap particularly on dirty spots, soak half an hour or more, gently rub on board and your clothes will be clean. Try it for one month and you will be convinced of its great advantages. VERY IMPORTANT TO KNOW.—That the best remedy for washing flannels to keep them from shrinking—wash in lukewarm water with FOREFATHERS' OR ECKERS' BOARD OF HEALTH SOAP (the greatest disinfectant known), and dry in a warm room; cold water hardens flannels and drying in cold air shrinks them. Ask your grocer for it. ECKERS' SOAPS WILL WASH WITH OR WITHOUT BOILING OR SCALDING.
