SATURDAY MORNING.....Jan. 22, 1887.

THE DEMOCRATIC PRESS

On the Democratic Reform Movement.

Cecil Democrat: What may prove to be the most important event of the week and perhaps of the year, occurred in Baltimore on Wednesday evening last. It was the mass-meeting of Maryland Democrats who are not satisfied with the merger of Democracy into "Gormanism." There can be no doubt that the dissatisfaction is deep and widespread. There can be as little doubt that the vast majority of Democratic voters are in accord in the matter. The only question is or can be as to the motive or seasonableness of the movement in Baltimore. The best works are sometimes spoiled by the want of skill or the want of power by their executors. If the work then begun shall secure the confidence of all who sympathize with it, there can be little doubt that the regime of the spoils and "Monos" is limited. If, on the other hand, the temptation of some catchword shall supervene, it is possible that the release of the freemen of Maryland from mortifying thraildom may be postponed. It looks now as if the people had sounded the depths, and sniffed the true iniquity, of the mastery that cunning has devised and so long vivified. It may be that it is reserved for the indefinite future to demonstrate that "a lie that is part the truth is the meanest kind of lies."

Centreville Record: It was determined to call meetings throughout the State and discuss the subjects of the movement in every county. A strong effort will be made to control the next State nominating convention, when, the leaders say, a ticket will be nominated that will insure reform and cement the party.

Greensboro' Free Press: Among the "faithful" who seek to purify the Democratic party; we notice: Col. J. W. Bryant, Clinton Cook and Bradley T. Johnson. They probably want their influence to act as saponifier and are aching to have it thrown into the pot and bring the whole thing to "soap" for themselves. The Democratic party fails to melt at their word. Gov. Hamilton is severely criticised in certain quarters for his use of self-constituted power whereby he managed to have his political reform effort swelled to respectable proportions by having the Farmers' Association meet in the same building on the same day. We deplore the injury that may result to an important organization by the overmanagement of a man who would curse the State of Maryland into an elysium of his own liking.

Annapolis Republican: Orators all aflame with fancied importance have swung their aimless blows at phantoms in the air—their own imaginings. "Bossism" is their favorite word on such occasions and some boss or other must be found and sacrificed. Such oratory is productive of little good. It serves to amuse. It may also effect the purpose of keeping good men and true upon their guard. But it belittles the party it pretends to serve and lowers even to the level of the dust the grand work which an earnest and true democracy is struggling to perform and has at such bitter cost achieved for the State and nation. It overlooks our patient labors, our struggles for the right and our victories. It would even asperse the motives of our leaders and cast a blur upon the brilliancy of what they have done. This is not generous warfare to say the least of it. More than this, it is suicidal policy. When leaders whose work has been a national triumph and whose efforts have reinstated Democracy in its long lost administration of national affairs are struck down by their own party, the deed is a horrible abuse of confidence and an act of foul treason to the party. The announced purpose of the meeting of the so-called State Democracy is to accomplish changes in the administration of Baltimore city affairs. To do this a flourish of trumpets and "breaking of pitchers" has been attempted sufficient to engender alarm over the entire State, if not to make utter rout and bedlam of the party. To call this reform is to misuse the English language. To seek for this the shelter and co-operation of the Democratic party is a wretched attempt to mislead and falsify. It is the reform which the captive Sampson made when he bowed and broke the pillars against which he loaned and crushed himself and the multitudes assembled with him. It is the reform which the incendiary's torch produces, when to burn some wretched hovel the once fair city becomes a blackened and desolate ruin. Words like those from the address are a libel upon the high officials of the State and a disgrace to the convention in which they have their origin.

Hagerstown Mail: We must be content to commend more particularly the address and resolutions, and speech of Gov. Hamilton at the meeting in Oratorio Hall to the earnest consideration of every one, breathing as they do a sentiment and urging a reformatory movement imperatively needed at this juncture. From the reports contained in the city press, which are now our only sources of intelligence in this connection, we judge that this meeting was a great success and we look for much good to spring from it and the sound utterances that have come from it.

Cambridge Democrat and News: The reform or reorganization meeting of Democrats in Baltimore on Wednesday does not seem to have amounted to a great deal.

Maryland Journal: Now, if Mr. Carter will just oblige the press and reply to Mr. Cowen we will have interesting reading during these dull days, for when these gladiators are swinging their "broadswords," the public observes approvingly and enjoys it.

Frederick Citizen: Many persons are amused at the efforts certain distinguished citizens are making to bring themselves before the people of the State. True reform is always desirable and commendable, but when reform is resorted to in order to get one set of men out and another set in, we cannot see what advantage is to be gained by the people. A wise man remarked a few days ago, when speaking of the so-called independent reform movement, "Well, if I had been out in the cold as long as some of these fellows who are shouting reform, I would try d—— hard to get in, too." * * * Let us all stop this crimination and recrimination. If we are Democrats let us turn our attention to our doubtful counties, select good men and elect them, and then fight to bring about whatever reforms are necessary to advance the interests of the Democracy and the tax-payers of Maryland. We can never succeed in any of these counties if we are to be everlastingly at daggers' points with one another. A united party is what we want.

Centreville Observer: A purer election law is all right and the legislature should make an effort to pass such a law, but if the agitators of reform permit such speakers as Cowen, the object for which they seek will not be reached, as such violent utterances are calculated to drive the good thinking people away from the cause. The movement seems to have dropped flat since the meeting on Wednesday. Another such meeting would sing the cause's requiem.

Easton Star: Gov. Hamilton held his indignation meeting in Baltimore last Wednesday night. The topic discussed was "that same old coon," the registration bill and the Baltimore elections. Yet the registration and election law in force in Baltimore, is the same that Gov. Hamilton had passed, and which he signed, when he was governor of Maryland. He was dissatisfied with the old law and had one passed to his own liking; now he comes to the front to denounce his own bantling. The truth is, Gov. Hamilton is a chronic grumbler when out of office, and when in office he quarrels with everybody. If Gov. Hamilton's Baltimore election law is not right, the Democratic party is perfectly competent to make it right, and they will change it if the people of Baltimore want it changed; but as Gov. Hamilton's law has proved a failure, it is not likely the Democratic party will look to him for another model. One thing is certain, the Democratic party is not going to make a registration law at the dictation of Gov. Hamilton, Jim Dennis, Jack Cowan, or any other man to advance the interests of the republican party at the expense of the democracy. That is not the kind of reform the Democrats want. It might suit Mr. Blaine and his friends, who are operating in the background, behind the ample coat-skirts of the belligerent ex-governor, but it would not suit the Democrats of either the city or the counties.

Caroline Democrat: We must tell crate that the men prominent in this movement are not all leaders of Democratic sentiments nor at all times voters of Democratic tickets, therefore they are not proper leaders of a reform within the lines of the Democratic party. The ill-advised rancor of their address will not add to the strength of the movement.

Westminster Democratic Advocate: It is true that politics are not pure in Baltimore, nor are the laws of the State perfection. Man himself is imperfect, and his work must of necessity be imperfect. Those who are struggling for an Utopia will go to their grave disappointed. Some of those who participated in the meeting really believe great abuses exist in the city and the State, and are honest in their endeavor for better methods and practices, but many are arrogant bosses and machine politicians when they have the power. Some have never permitted a man to go to a convention or be nominated for an office without their sanction, and others are only Democrats when it suits their purposes to act with the party. Among them were some who have aspired to positions and are chagrinned at not attaining their ambition. Others hope to get up a revolution and ride into place and power. The charges of the Oratorio Hall committee are mostly denied by facts; and the records of the chief actors at the meeting, do not encourage the belief that they, if permitted to control matters, would give more satisfaction.

Harford Democrat: All will agree that if abuses exist as they picture in our party management, they should be eradicated. But there are grave doubts about the truth of their statements, and greater doubts about the propriety of putting recognized growlers and kickers in possession of the party machinery, and to get possession of this machinery seems to be largely the object of the present convention.

Easton Democrat: The men who are interested in this movement mean business, no intention of doing aught else than contesting at the primaries for time-honored Democratic principles and practices was expressed, and the determination to end by legitimate party methods the rule of the corrupt oligarchy now dominating and disgracing the fair fame of the State. The result will be the purification of the party in Maryland, the nomination and election of true men to office and the permanent retirement of the self-constituted leaders who for the attainment of their own selfish ends have necessitated this movement. The ball has been started and will be kept rolling to the end, and all right thinking Democrats will bid those who are engaged in this laudable work God-speed.

Easton Ledger: It is certainly belittling to what its promoters and participants claim to be a great movement to put it on the low plane of personal antagonism to a somewhat prominent member of the party.

Cambridge Chronicle: The people of Maryland are tired of this threadbare plea of reform, and this latest indictment of the true Democracy, as prepared by spiteful rivals and open enemies, will be quashed as full of flaws and as unworthy the consideration of a loyal Democrat.

Noble Benefactions.—The New York Times says that the Samuel J. Tilden fund for the public library for which his will provides is not likely to fall below the sum of $4,000,000. Johns Hopkins, Baltimore's most liberal benefactor, appropriated $6,000,000 to public uses in Baltimore and vicinity, $3,000,000 being set apart for the university alone. George Peabody devoted many millions to charitable objects, giving $1,000,000 to Peabody Institute in Baltimore and $3,500,000 to education in the South. Stephen Girard, the Philadelphia philantrophist, left almost the whole of his estate of $9,000,000 to be applied to educational and benevolent objects. The Pratt Free Library in Baltimore is worthy to rank with the Tilden endowment from the fact that while the sum given, $1,000,000, is smaller, it is appropriated while the donor is still living and under his personal direction.

The Savannah News finds cause for congratulation in the fact that in Georgia "the holiday season has been almost wholly free from the crimes of violence which in former years brought sadness to so many hearts and trouble into so many homes." The News gives the credit for this gratifying state of affairs to the growing temperance sentiment throughout the State, and goes on to say: "While prohibition may not always prohibit, it is educating the young men to an appreciation of the benefits of temperance. In Georgia, therefore, and other States where the prohibition sentiment is strong and growing, it may reasonably be expected that each succeeding holiday season will be less and less marked by the crimes which whiskey leads men to commit."

Insanity Developed by Marriage.—A sad outbreak of insanity is reported from near Grafton, W. Va. Washington Lake has five grown daughters. Two weeks ago Tabitha got married, and the young people of the neighborhood, including her four sisters, celebrated the event by dancing all night and nearly all the next day. On the evening of the second day Martha, one of the sisters, lost her reason and developed into a raving maniac, and four days later the bride went stark mad. Since then the three other sisters have exhibited evidences of insanity.

Magnets Which Never Fail to Draw.—The semi-annual matchless mark-down sale of high-class garments for men, youths and boys overcoats, suits, &c. All being sacrificed without regard to present value or cost. Now is the appointed time to make one dollar do the work of two at Acme Hall, 17 E. Baltimore (new number) near Charles street, Baltimore. *

Baltimore Market.—The Baltimore papers of yesterday quote as follows:

Wheat—Longberry 96c.@97c.; Fultz, 94c.@95c. for fair to good. Corn—White, prime, 47@48; yellow, 46@47. Oats—39.

A Large Stock for sale

jl5. by T. W. ELIASON, Jr.

Letter from Still Pond.

Messrs. Editors:—We were rather disappointed you were not with us last Saturday to discuss exchange measures and hear the reports of prices patrons of the exchange obtained for peaches at Barnard's wharf. You have a report of the proceedings, I am aware, but this mode is not as interesting as being present and participating in the exercises.

The unanimous voice of those who sold their peaches through the exchange was that it was a grand success. All were well pleased and satisfied with the result, realizing much higher prices than were obtained in any other markets.

The writer was disappointed at the failure of an attempt to pass a resolution advising growers not to sell their orchards. This subject was discussed at some length but not as thoroughly ventilated as we could desire for want of time, or, I think, the result would have been different. The Worton exchange failed on this account. The larger orchards were sold there, which kept other buyers away and one or two enjoyed the monopoly, just what they aimed at and what was boasted of by buyers. The exchange here would have suffered a like fate, if we had given way to the importunity of buyers and sold out. But we had taken stock in the exchange, believed it was a grand institution, had really formed a compact one with another, had invited buyers for the purpose of selling our fruit from day to day at auction, a line of steamers was put on to carry the peaches to railroad, and believed it not the square thing to sell out, break the whole arrangement up and drive the buyers away. Some of us think this would not be treating our neighbor as ourselves. They took stock, incurred some expense, entered into the arrangement in good faith, believed a reform was needed and agreed as we understood to give this a fair trial. Again, what would we have thought of ourselves after inviting the exchange officials here to operate, at very considerable expense, then sell out? Would this be the fair thing? Why, gentlemen of the jury, I protest against this thing! Depend upon it, many buyers would have gloried in such a catastrophy; just what they wanted; just what they threatened, and just what they will attempt in the future if farmers don't consult their interests and band together in a common cause. Many buyers though are favorable to the exchange, like its operations and are favorable to its continuance, but the number of this kind is unfortunately small.

What is gained by selling orchards? A large majority of dealers are not responsible. As long as they are making money, all right, but just as soon as it becomes apparent that they must loose nine-tenths of them will back out. Who can say that this has not been the case in the past? And we may expect it in the future. Farmers, let us stand together, organize consult our interests, work for reform, labor for concert of action.

We really are behind the rest of the world yet. All other trades and professions are banded together for a common interest except editors and farmers. Even the labor unions of our country are far outstripping us in this particular. Monopolies of every description are even defying the law in a manner unmolested. Are farmers less capable of protecting their interests in a legitimate, honorable way? Are they content to live on in the old beaten track? Will some rise up still and antagonize an association so necessary, so important, so vital to our interests as the exchange system by breaking away, selling their crops and leave perhaps a few to fight the battle alone? And who most likely in the end discouraged, disgusted, unsupported, give it up and supinely brood over the lost cause. This is what selling out means if practiced to any considerable extent.

We have much more to say on this subject, but enough at present.

We hope to have a large audience of interested farmers, editors and others at our meeting at Still Pond next Saturday, Jan. 29, at which we propose to discuss this subject in all its bearings as we are satisfied some are laboring under a misconception of its merits, and when critically studied may we hope be induced to change their mind. The new railroad project will also claim our attention. And the district distribution association matter will be taken up, too. All are invited. Eusebius.

Our Kent County Railroad,

Now called the Baltimore & Delaware Bay, is a subject of general interest.

Many readers of this have stock or have lost it therein—all as Kent countians have an interest, past, present and future. The present as related to our town, is what now engages the attention of the writer.

The Chestertown station is in a very inconvenient place, and expensive to passengers as well as regards freight. Our depot should be nearer the heart of the town—nearer the bulk of freight, the factories and stores.

Can not some town movement be made to assist in gaining such a point? Can not some public pressure be brought to bear on the great "unknown" owner, not only to change the station, but to put the road in better order? And then the same force to bear on the lessee to give us better equipment?

The writer of this would like to aid some such action and asks others to contribute their suggestions.

One reason for asking immediate attention to this is that the railroad lessee has in contemplation some improvements at the present station which if effected would bar any action for a change.

There are other points in this subject which can be better presented at a meeting of those who will do something than in this article, which is hastily contributed by A Citizen.
