Dr Jas Hall

(Dear sir)

I passd through Friendship and said Boardley and he is anxious to get away there seems to be no difficulty with any of that lot unless it be with gaunt his mistress has promised to give him some money to go with but it was thought advisable not to give it him untill he arrives in Baltimore, for that purpose Mr Griffith promised to see the lady & get her to pay the money to him & he would give a draft on Baltimore, and not only so but he would use every exertion to get them off; he is a man whom I could can be depended on, I agreed with owners of the steam boat to bring them on; he will bring them on, at the same price that the other man promised to do it for. The other Dameleys are ready. But Dr Brewer says it will be a hazardous business to defer it untill this day two days back for he believes in view of the present weather, it is very uncertain whether the steam boat will run on that day; that would be a terrible disaster as there is no other way of conveying them the Dr Doctor thinks by all means I ought to try to get them off next Sunday - I dont like to take any
