Leave the Buttons.

"Why do you rip the buttons from that pretty dress, Mattie?" asked a lady of her cousin, whom she found busy in her room with a chair full of garments beside her. "They are such a perfect match for the cloth, it seems a pity to separate them."

"Oh, I always save my buttons!" her cousin answered, with the air of a capable manager. "Ellie has outgrown the dress and I am going to give it away, but I may ... the buttons sometime. I have a box ...e buttons that I have saved from ... These cost fifty cents a doz... ...t afford to throw them away."

... going to a poor child?" ... seeing in her swift fancy ...rlorn little girl with her ...her in some places, and ...ers.

...l the cousin, carelessly, ...hings over to old Mrs. ... charity box for the ...ay to get rid of what ...ithout having to look ... do you manage your ...

... to give," replied the oth... ...blush. "The few things I ...all go to one person only, a ...ess who sews for my landlady ... time to sew for herself."

"...ell, of course all can't give alike," ...mented the matron, as she went on swiftly cutting a half-dozen pearl buttons from an outgrown pinafore.

"I believe," thought Cousin Maria, as she left the house, "that I will call on Mrs. Platt this morning. She was one of my mother's friends, and I wonder I have not been there before."

So she was presently sitting with the delicate, sweet-faced elderly woman who kept the charity-box in her modest home.

"Yes," said Mrs. Platt, in answer to a question, "I began visiting among the poor several years ago, and formed some true friendships in that way. I know just what the needs are in many of the families, and find little difficulty in disposing of all articles sent to me."

"Are many things sent you out of repair or with the buttons gone?" asked the caller, with a purpose dawning in her mind.

"Oh, yes," said Mrs. Platt, "many of the garments have rips, or tears, or thin places that need a piece laid under. And the buttons!" Here the old lady grew energetic. "You would be surprised to see the good clothes that come in here sometimes with every button ripped off! I don't know what to make of it! It is a kind of thrift that leaves a stain on charity. I do think when people want to save their buttons, they should at least replace them with others of a cheaper kind. I am ashamed to give away a garment without buttons!"

And Cousin Maria agreed with her. But not to stop with mere words, she made her sympathy practical from that time forth by frequent visits to Mrs. Platt's charity-box for although she had not much to give, she could at least mend and sew on buttons.—Youth's Companion.

Tale of a Pet Fish.

Three months ago B. F. Male of Harlem was wandering through Fulton Market and saw a basket full of live crawfish. The thought occurred to him that it would be a good plan to buy one and make a pet of it. Mr. Male purchased a crustacean, and tells this story of it:

"I took it home and placed it in a tub. It soon became very tome and, among other peculiarities I discovered it was fond of music. Whenever "Yankee Doodle" was played on the piano or whistled the crawfish, when held by the back, using its large claw as a baton, would keep perfect time, and its legs would move with the rapidity of a jig dancer, following the music as long as it lasted.

"One of the most difficult things to teach it," continued Mr. Malone, "was the trick of writing its own name. A penholder would be placed in its claw, and by moving it back and forth over a sheet of paper the trick was accomplished. After a month of this it seemed to understand just what was wanted of it, and it finally succeed in writing its name intelligently. It was interest... ...to study the fish when asleep. It would ...its large claw under its head, curl itself ... ball with its small claw extended. ... position it would remain for an ...r a banquet of angle worms.

The little fellow resentd this, ...t the eel with his large claw by ... Instantly there was a small-sized ...e eel would itself around the craw... ...crushed its life out; then it leisure... ...away the stony overcoat and feasted ...e remains."—New York Sun.

Cabbage in Half an Hour.

For the benefit of the mothers who may think either I or the cooking school have gone estray on the matter of cooking cabbage, I want to emphasize here the advantage of the new way over the old. I was as skeptical over the notion of cabbage being properly cooked in half an hour, as any one of you can be; but my first experiment corrected me, and all who tasted this maligned vegetable served after the new method declared themselves surprised.

Have plenty of salted, boiling water, in which a teaspoonful of soda has been dissolved, plunge the cabbage in, top downward, leave it uncovered and let it boil until tender, that will be, as given in the time table, from twenty minutes to half an hour. Take it out into a colander, drain well, put in bits of butter, some salt and pepper, and serve at once. It will be as delicate as cauliflower; the color will be retained and there will not be an unpleasant odor over the house, such as is always associated with boiling cabbage. Try it once, and then see if the School Kitchen Learning has not gotten several steps in advance of your old, traditional methods.—Sallie Joy White, in March Wide Awake.

A duel was fought in Paris the other day in which those old-fashioned weapons, the bow and arrow, were employed. The principals were each given a six-foot bow and quiver full of steel headed arrows. Then the seconds flew. Shooting began at will. After several shots had been exchanged one of the combatants started to run and the other chased him, shooting as he ran. The first fighter climbed a tree and the victors shot arrows among the branches until his stock was exhausted and then he went quietly home to breakfast. The man in the tree was pretty badly wounded. The fight, as usual, was about a woman.

Suggestive.

American Farmer for March.

A kicking cow is generally owned by a kicking man. He kicks at everything; politics, religion, farming and cows.

Don't feed your heifer calves so they will be like the one that was killed by the prodigal son; if you do, when you come to milk them you will find that you have spent your feed in vain.

Better begin your spring plowing two days too late than one day too early. The ground plowed just before it is fit will not be of much use that season.

"It is never too late to mend" your suit of farm ideas. Put a big patch on the seat of your pants where they are much worn because you have "sat down" on all improved methods of farming for the past twenty-five years.

This is not intended as a hint that your father was a fool. By no means; he used his brains to more advantage than you do, but he used them at a great disadvantage. He had no farm papers, no improved machinery, no commercial fertilizers, no railroads, no nothing as compared to his son.

So what he did was by main strength of muscle and character; whereas you let the machines save your muscle, and heaven only knows where you keep brains. You don't let them appear when you buy scrub stock and sneer at thoroughbred stock and call it "fancy," nor when you refuse to sow clover seed because it is too high, and then buy a colt at a big price because he has a little trotting blood in him. No, our friends, your fathers and ours had a heap more sense than their sons have. They were never seen sitting on the top rail of the fence whittling sticks and complaining that "farming don't pay." They made it pay, and if we don't it is not the fault of the farm.

You are not saving time when you drive up the cows with a dog, but you are wasting money. Profitable cows are not noted for speed. It is great fun for your son to see the cows jump over two or three of the bars in the pasture fence after he has given them a good start with the help of the dog, but it is not quite so much fun for you when you take to market the butter which is small in quantity and bad in quality.

You have plenty of time before spring work begins to make a good gate for your pasture, and its convenience alone will pay for its cost, to say nothing about the benefit to the caws and the time saved.

An Island Paradise.

Off the coast of Georgia is an island 11 miles long by 2 in width called Jekyl Island. It has recently passed into possession of a number of rich Northerners known as the Jekyl Island Club. A club-house has been built on it at a cost of $150,000, and, including this, the club has already spent over $300,000 in improvements. They have two naphtha and one steam launch, and ten other styles of boats, 21 horses and mules. The pay-roll of the employes is $650 a week. A smooth shell-road drive of 11 miles is one of the attractive features of the island. It was settled by Gen. Oglethorpe. The Frenchmen purchased the island in 1791. There are 78 rooms in the club house exclusive of the basement. The annex, built for the servants' use, stands some distance away, and is a beautiful structure, finished in wood, natural colors. Mr. McEvers Bayard Brown, a member of the club, is completing a $15,000 residence. The house built for the superintendent and his assistant is three stories and a basement, cost $80,000, and is the best framed house in Georgia. Thousands of bulbs and flowering shrubs and roses have been set in the long, winding walks that traverse the broad lawn. Gasoline lamps light up the grounds at night while a 450 gallons-a-minute artesian well that pierces the rock foundations of Jekyl to a depth of 400 feet—far below the last faint echoes of the mermaids' revel—furnishes water everywhere, and very good to drink. The place is called an island paradise, but it is not a watering place, its owners intending it only for the use of members and their families.

A Hundred Tons of Money.

It hardly seems possible that the money paid in one month for a ten-cent article, could, if pennies were used in payment, weigh one hundred tons. Yet one of our bright school boys has figured that this is true of Diamond Dyes. To judge from the stocks of our dealers in dye stuffs, Diamond Dyes own the field of package dyes, and are a complete success. Of course they have imitators. "Nothing is a success until imitated." But no one wants to risk a counterfeit when the genuine can be obtained at the same price. Three new colors have lately been added to the list of Diamond Dyes: Fast Stocking Black, Turkey Red for Cotton, and Brown for Cotton. The manufacturers, Wells, Richardson & Co.; Burlington, Vt., will send colored samples of these new dyes, with book of directions, to any address, free of charge. These additions seem to have made the line so complete that any shade can be matched with some color of Diamond Dyes. The beautiful sample book of shaded colors, lately sent to all dealers in dyes, will delight the eye of any lady. "It's easy to die with Diamond Dyes," is so absolutely true that home dyeing is no longer a difficult and disagreeable task. Almanacs, with their hints as to proper times for different work, tell us that now is the time for Spring dyeing. This, together with the thought of that hundred tons of money, leads us to ask what school boy can figure how many thousands of ladies are now saying that this is the time to use Diamond Dyes.

Thieves at Funerals.—Many thieves ply their business almost exclusively at funerals. They come in at the front door, explains a New York detective, with the clergy, the bearers, or any respectable people with whom they may fall in. "If once inside the door, the whole house and everybody in it are at the mercy of their clever and industrious fingers. It is an easy matter for one of them to slip upstairs and rifle the chambers while the solemn services are in progress. Servants are very easily persuaded that he is only the undertaker's man, and nobody else would have sufficient assurance or cause of suspicion to intercept him. Then the crowded drawing room or hall offers the adept pickpocket a tempting harvest."

I am satisfied that Cancer is hereditary in my family. My father died of it, a sister of my mother died of it, and my own sister died of it. My feelings may be imagined, then, when the horrible disease made its appearance on my side. It was a malignant Cancer, eating inwardly in such a way that it could not be cut out. Numerous remedies were used for it, but the Cancer grew steadily worse, until it seemed that I was doomed to follow the others of the family. I took Swift's Specific, which, from the first day, forced out the poison, and continued its use until I had taken several bottles, when I found myself well. I know that S. S. S. cured me.

What Mr. H. I. Budd, Corresponding Secretary of the Burlington County Agricultural Society has to Say About the Microbe Killer.

Mount Holly, Feb. 17, 1889.

Radam's Microbe Killer Co.

Gentlemen:—Until persuaded by a regular practicing physician, last October, to try William Radam's Microbe Killer, I had experimented with many different kinds of patent medicines, and had placed myself under treatment from several of our most noted physicians, in addition to which I visited many of the consumptive health resorts of the country, all in a vain search for relief from an inherited tendency to pulmonary disease, aggravated by attacks of pneumonia, congestion and inflammation. In sheer despair I tried your remedy, but shall ever bless the doctor who recommended it, for I am now entirely free from the hacking cough that made life miserable; am improving in health and rapidly gaining in strength. My friends are so surprised at my improved condition that they almost weary me relating the story of my cure. I have suffered so much and seen so much suffering from this fatal disease that I feel it my duty to advise all to try what I believe has proved my salvation.

Sincerely yours, H. I. Budd.
