THE BREATH OF FLOWERS

In Perfume Making Germany Challenges French Supremacy.

The supremacy of France in the perfume industry is seriously challenged by Germany, which is now producing perfumes which are genuine rivals of those manufactured by both France and England. Some of the largest factories devoted to this industry are in Leipsic, but Berlin, Carlsruhe and Hamburg are important centers of the trade. There has been a great increase in the last few years in the diversity of essential oil produced from plants, and forty varieties of plants are now employed in the German factories, which also use such products of foreign lands as nutmegs, cinnamon, camphor, balsams, pepper, musk, ambergris, &c.

The production of the essential oil is expensive, ranging from about $227 a pound downward, according to the scarcity of the oil in the plant. With fresh flowers, the distillation takes place as near the place of picking as possible, as the fresher the products the better. The stills contain about thirty-three hundred pounds of flowers and the necessary amount of water. Great care is taken as to the amount of heat supplied and its regularity, the process being thoroughly controlled, and an excellent product resulting.

In the "fat" process the flowers are carefully sorted and the chlorophyll glands broken. They are then stirred gently for some hours, that they may become thoroughly saturated with the slightly warmed fat with which the flowers have been mixed. The fat and flower mixture is then separated in contrifugal machines, so that the fat may be used again with fresh flowers until it is thoroughly saturated with the perfume. Then a layer of cold fat is placed on glass plates and covered with flowers. Many of these are stacked together in crates and left for about thirty days, during which time the flowers are changed every day. At the end of this time the fat is cut into strings and placed on wire web frames, which are placed alternately with metal sheets, covered with flowers, in a press, where they are subjected to a light current of pure air. In this way the utmost amount of perfume element is obtained, but the operations require careful attention to prevent the trace of an hereby scent.

The essential oils are packed in round iron containers, which are coated with zinc inside, and very securely closed. For the manufacture of liquid perfumes only the best quality of alcohol is used, and never that obtained from potatoes or corn. For the cheaper class of scent the dilution is often made with vinegar and water, as this is cheap and the scent lasts for a long time. Artificial perfumes are made much more easily now than formerly, and can be secured ready for use with little admixture to add to their durability. Formerly this was an expensive process, necessitating a mixture of the lixiviated extract from the French fat with the thereal oils. The advance which has been made in the perfume industry, if it is continued, will eventually result in the cheapening of fine perfumes very materially, to the joy of the feminine soul.

THE KNOWLEDGE THAT COUNTS.

It's The Lessons We Learn In Everyday Hard Work That Make Us Successful.

Mr. R. J. Reynolds, President and Founder of the largest manufacturing plant East of the Mississippi, belongs to that class of men whose success in life has been due to their own energy and industry, though the circumstances of Mr. Reynold's boyhood afforded him a sound basis upon which to build. He was endowed by nature with health and strength, full of energy and ambitious, while yet a tender age, to lead in whatever he undertook. His father, a large planter and manufacturer in Patrick county Virginia, made his yearly contracts with his laborers on the condition that they kept up with young "Dick."

Even as a boy, Mr. Reynolds was never contented unless in some way employed. He found pleasure in tasks that others found too tedious or burdensome.

Mr. Reynolds, while in his teens, planted, cultivated, cured, manufactured and worked in every department of the manufacture, and had successfully held the position of manager of a factory. In the year 1875, hardly more than a boy, he was manufacturing tobacco under the name of R. J. Reynolds & Co., in a very small factory at Winston, N. C.

The methods and processes of manufacturing tobacco in those days were very crude. Other men were content with the machinery, processes and methods in use. Mr. Reynolds, and the men associated with him, worked out by experiment, the reasons for the prevailing methods, and by the help of the skilled men in charge of the various departments of the manufacturing plant, they invented, perfected and adopted improved machinery and processes, until today the flat plug tobacco has been completely revolutionized, and the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company is known as the largest, best equipped and cleanest flat plug tobacco manufacturing plant in the world. They also own, for which a patent has been applied, the great discovery of a process for the manufacture of their new brand REFINED granulated smoking tobacco. It was discovered by eminent scientists and their experts on tobacco. After many years of study and experiments they found out how to produce the most delightful and harmless tobacco for pipe and cigarette smokers. It is proving a great favorite with smokers.

A visit to the now mammoth plant of R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., proves not more interesting to the seeker for information and an insight into the tobacco manufacturing industry, than to the student of the labor problem. The visitor cannot but be impressed by the utmost harmony and good feeling which prevails between the employer and employed.

Strikes and other disagreements and labor agitations are unknown. Good hours and good wages, entirely acceptable to the employees, have always been allowed, which is fully manifested in unusually large number of employees who started in with Mr. Reynolds many years ago and have never found it necessary to demand higher wages or to leave the employ of his company. Many of the heads of the various departments started in the business as boys and grew up under Mr. Reynolds' tutorship. With their ever increasing knowledge of tobacco, they developed into experts, and have brought into the business vigor and improvement. R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company's plant of Winston Salem, N. C. U. S. A., stands a visible proof of foresight, united effort, untiring energy and the insistence upon fair dealing by its founder.

WAR AGAINST CONSUMPTION

All-nations are endeavoring to check the ravages of consumption, the "white plague" that claims so many victims each year. Foley's Honey and Tar cures coughs and colds perfectly and you are in no danger of consumption. Do not risk your health by taking some unknown preparation when Foley's Honey and Tar is safe and certain in results. The genuine is in yellow package. Sold by all druggists.
