The natives of this country continue on term of apparent friendship. The Colonists are generally pretty well satisfied with the change of Government, and are making efforts tho, in some respects feeble, to obtain sustenance from the soil. I wrote you some time ago that since the war there was much improvement in this respect and I think I may now safely say there has been no decline

From a gentleman from Monrovia not long since I heard it intimated that it was probable that the Maryland Col. Society would abandon the system
