William E. Temple vs. Sarah E. Temple.

THE object of this Bill is to procure a decree for divorce a vinculo matrimonii.

The Bill states:

2. That your Orator and Sarah E. Temple, the defendant, were married in the city of Wilmington, State of Delaware, sometime during the month of September 1907, by the Reverend Mr. Wolfe, and they lived together until the second day of June 1911. That no children have been born to them as a result of said marriage.

3. That although your Orator has always behaved himself as a faithful and affectionate husband towards his wife, Sarah E. Temple, she, the said Sarah E. Temple has on divers times and occasions since her marriage committed the crime of adultery with one Edward Anderson both in Caroline County, Maryland, and in the city of Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania, and that the said Sarah E. Temple is at present living and cohabiting with the said Edward Anderson in the city of Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania.

4. That your Orator has not lived or cohabited with the said Sarah E. Temple since he discovered her said adulteries.

WARREN C. HURLOCK

A BOYS' BAND

Plays the Masterpieces of All Countries.

From thirteen to twenty—that is the range of age in Signor Salvatore Ciricillo's Italian Band. From this statement we except Signor Ciricillo himself, and his nine-year-old understudy, Angelo Vitale. Ciricillo has trained his organization up to a remarkable degree of perfection for any age. And they are all mere boys, twenty-five of them. Their dash, spirit and precision, coupled with an irresistible rhythm, are the most distinguishing features of the organization.

An astonishing variety of selections are rendered by the band, some of the Wagner, Flotow, Verdi, Donizetti, Bizet, Mascagni, Weber, Gounod, Herbert and Cohan. Every style, you see; classical and popular; from grave to gay, to lively to severe.

This is the sixth year that Signor Ciricillo has conducted this band, and it is now at its highest degree of efficiency. The most interesting member of the organization is probably the smallest boy in it—Angelo Vitale—composers represented being Rossini, who directs the band during a part of each concert. He is only nine now, but for two years has been flourishing a baton with the ease of a director of many times his years. Such overtures as Rossini's "William Tell" and Wagner's "Tannhauser" are "nuts to him." Most interesting features of the program are the brass sextette and quartette, directed by this precocious young gentleman, in quite the style of Ciricillo himself.

AN ORCHESTRA OF SOLDIERS

From Austro-Hungary.

Army bands are noted for their good music. The bands of the Austrian army are especially noted for their excellence. We are not likely ever to have an entire Austrian army band in this country, but there is over here—and we have secured for this Chautauqua—an organization composed of the cream of the Austrian army bands.

The seven members of the Austro-Hungarian Orchestra have, nearly all of them, actually served as instrumentalists in the Austrian army. They are all soloists, each on his respective instrument—by the way, there are six varieties of instruments for the seven men—two violins, a viola, a bass, a clarinet, a 'cello and an Hungarian Cymbalum. This latter sounds like cymbals, but isn't. You may more properly compare it to a piano or a xylophone.

AUSTRO-HUNGARIAN ORCHESTRA.

THE BIRD THAT CAN SING, AND WON'T SING

But He Sings at the Chautauqua.

You would'nt think that Ernest Gamble had ever coaxed off from music, or grumbled and complained: "Pa, I can't do it." So goes the story, though. He hated music as a boy; he had no voice or ear, he said, and everyone believed him. When he entered high school he found singing to be required of all students; but he prevailed upon his father to ask that he be excused. That request being denied, Ernest took up the study and suddenly found that he liked it. There was no trouble after that, except to supply him with teachers, and no one would think now, as his big full voice rolls out from the Chautauqua platform that he was once the boy who "sings."

A 1736 VIOLIN A MASTER OF THE PLATFORM

With one possible exception, Miss Verna Page, of the Gamble Recital Party, is the first musician to use an old master violin of the Cremone school upon the Lyceum platform. Miss Page's instrument, which she obtained in 1907, was made in 1737 by that artist, Joseph Guarnarius des Gesu. It is interesting to note that this violin was made in the same year in which Guarnarius made the famous violin of Paganini, so that it may well be called a brother to the Paganini instrument. With this violin alone one might think Miss Page well equipped.

Not so Miss Page. She has obtained still another treasure of the past, a Gagliano dated 1736. Miss Page is one of the best-trained concert violinistes in the country, and her skilled and sympathetic interpretations, together with the pure, sweet tones of her violin, makes a combination which is as rare as it is delightful.
