a fair price, I for one should be very inclined to do it — were it for had then to charter a smaller vessel — I send a smaller Company. I fully appreciate, as you suggest on the outside of your letter, the necessity, for collateral reasons, of our sending an expedition this fall.

We had letters by the Samson, as I suppose you did. The Cape Palmas trouble is not yet settled. Roze & Dec. sailed for England in the last Steamer, & are to come here on their way home! Mr. Says came in the Samson. But we have no word from him.

I thank you I am better again — as all our others are —

Yours truly
