MRS. M. A. DEKAY EXPLAINS BUSINESS

To The Assistant Editor and Conducts Her Through The Brick Factory Where Hat Bags and Folding Boxes Are Manufactured

Mrs. Margaret A. DeKay has the distinction of being the only woman in Pocomoke who personally conducts a manufacturing business.

Not only does she operate the machinery which each year turns out thousands of hat bags and boxes, but she also makes the crates in which the bags and boxes are packed, personally superintends the shipping of the same, keeps a general supervision of her agents, is her own bookkeeper, and is, in fact, owner, manufacturer and general manager of the entire business.

The hat bag and the folding hat box are inventions of her late husband, Capt. H. A. DeKay, who, while thinking along the lines of his invention, had a dream in which he saw every detail worked out for him. Fearing that he might forget some part of the invention he awakened his former wife and went over all the details with her, thus impressing it upon his own mind as well as upon her.

Capt. DeKay secured a patent upon his invention, but it was not until a few years ago that the brick factory, in all its completeness, was erected. This factory is located on Willow street in the rear of the double brick dwelling house, owned and occupied by the present Mrs. DeKay and her sister, Mrs. Mollie Callaway.

Here we recently made a visit, and were much interested in watching Mrs. DeKay operate the different pieces of machinery, as she explained the whole process to us. Leading us to the paper cutter, she gave the rope at the right a gentle pull and thus started the electric motor, which supplies power to the machinery. Then she proceeded to cut and corner the heavy pasteboard used for the bottom of the bags.

A large pile of dry goods boxes was seen in a corner. "I buy these boxes from the merchants," she explained "and from them I make the heads for my shipping crates. This is the way I saw," she added in a bright laughing manner, as if she thoroughly enjoyed it. Slipping a belt over a wheel, she pulled another rope, and at once the electric motor set a circular saw in motion. Then she applied the board to the saw, guiding the board, while the saw sawed much like the proverbial knife cuts hot butter. Indeed, we never saw a saw saw as that saw saws.

A form is used for making the bag, the folding box and the crates, Lathes of the desired length are placed around the crate form. The bags or boxes are stacked in and pressed down by means of iron bolts fitted in grooves at various points. Then the heads are nailed to the lathes and the crates with their contents are shipped chiefly through the South, where Mrs. DeKay and her agents are building up an extensive business.

The folding hat box is more complicated in construction. At the scoring machine the pasteboard is creased so as to permit the box to bend and fold as desired. The boxes are 16, or 19x19, and 8 or 10 inches in height when raised, Tapes tie the lid on. When the hat is removed, the box can be made to collapse and lie flat.

Forseeing that hats would be made smaller and higher, Capt. DeKay was at work inventing a box to accomodate the present style of hats with high feature trimmings, when his death occured. The form, with pasteboard covering, remains in its uncompleted state just where he left it two years ago.

On the second floor of the factory we found Miss Carrie Disharoon, who makes her home with "Aunt Maggie," and assists her in the factory. Miss Carrie was busily engaged in making hat bags, whirling the paper around the form, pasting on cardboard bottoms, and folding with such rapidity as to make us gasp. "How many do you make a day?" Six hundred," she replied with a smile. She is very happy in her work, and thinks she is very fortunate to be so independent. Miss Carrie's mother died when she was quite young. Then, my great-uncle, Mr. Levin Clogg, is so good to me," she added. "I am expecting him at any time, He has been in North Yakima Washington, and was detained there by fire in his $50,000 block of buildings.

She handed us marked articles of "The Yankima Republican," which he had sent her and in big headlines we read; "Three Stories in Clogg Block Suffer in Midnight Fire.

"L. H. Clogg (bldg.) loss, $10,000: insurance, $35,000.

"Clogg Building is Proving Popular. Proprietor on Eve of Departure for His Home in East (New York). Has Every Room Rented."

But here our pen jumps back from Yakima to Pocomoke, and Mrs. DeKay and the steam boiler, and the electric motor, and a whole barrelful of paste are objects of interest.

That barrel of paste keep our gaze revetted. We looked at it, until we almost felt "stuck up," like the bags stored in racks all about us. That Mrs. DeKay and Miss Carrie are not "stuck up" is a wonder to us, but they are not.

"Now, I'll take you down in the 'alligator,' as the boys call it," said Mrs. DeKay, and we laughingly descended in the elevator.—Ledger-Enterprize.

I want to tell you how much good your Swamp-Root did me. About four years ago, I suffered from what the doctors called fistula and for two years of that time I endured what no tongue can tell.
