My Dear Sir

Yours of Yesterday is received & "contents noted!" Let me acquaint you with the fact that those two in that connection are my special dislike. I am very sorry — & so are all the members of my household — that you continue so lame & unwell. Would that we could do something, or recommend something for you! We can say you must be patient — & remember what Horace says, "Nihil est, ab omni parte, beatum." — I did want to say something or another about what you say you would say about mine of the 22nd but from my inability to make out two words in yours, I must defer it. The words occur in the eighth line from the bottom. They are two long words, & are designed to characterise my letter, & I reckon you can read them!
