POLITICS IN EVERYTHING.

[Communicated.]

CHESTERTOWN, MD., Aug. 7, 1913.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

Without wishing to enter into the rather heated political controversy now going on in Kent, I desire, as an humble, private citizen, to call attention to the amount of worldly wisdom contained in the remark recently attributed to John D. Urie, Esq.; said remark reported to have been, "There is a little politics in everything."

It matters not what the vocation or avocation may be, there is always a little politics to be played. Whether we belong to the professional, business, sporting, or loafing class, we have politics; otherwise we run into snags.

Among the professions, that of the ministry of our country is supposed to be supreme. It is considered to stand for the highest type of citizenship, for the best code of morality, and for a Christianity that tops all systems of religion and offers to man the only method of redemption, and the only hope of a future salvation.

If politics were such a violation of a right course of living, it might be supposed that ministers would include it in their list of sins, and direct their preaching against any practices of a political nature.

But so far from that being the case, it is hard to find a more political aggregation than an assemblage of these same preachers. I care not whether it be a Methodist conference, a Presbyterian synod, an Episcopal convention, or a Roman college—they are politicians to the core.

I do not care to be understood as saying this in a disparaging way. I know that church politics and State politics, while containing similar elements, are widely different in many details. I would be loth to think that all the methods adopted by State politicians were in vogue among the churchmen. Still there have been instances of dirty politics even in the church. But no one will deny there is politics there, and some sessions of these devoted and honorable men are almost equal in political interest to a national convention.

It is easy to trace politics down through other phases of existence. The merchant must be politic to sell; the banker to obtain deposits and investments; the lawyer to win cases; the doctor to obtain, and often restrain, patients; the society man or woman to gain a secure footing; the sport to get his tips; the candidate to win his election; the contractor to land a job, and so on down through all the catalogue of occupations.

When it comes to public schools, as an uninformed man, I would like to ask the question, "How can schools be kept out of politics, when all the machinery connected with their creation and maintenance is run by State power?"

The public school is a child of the State, and everybody connected with State organization is necessarily a politician.

The money appropriated by a legislature—a hotbed of politics. The commander-in-chief of the public school system—the Governor—secures his position after heated political campaigns. When elected he proceeds to appoint School Boards for the different counties. If he is a Republican, I notice the commissioners are predominantly Republican; if a Democrat, the Board is of that persuasion.

a Democrat gets the position.

The trustees of the different schools throughout the county, in the main, reflect the color of the appointing Board, and if there were the same opportunity in the choice of teachers, I doubt not that we should see politics as clearly in their selection as in any other move connected with public education.

The only place I can see where there is no evidence of politics is in the student body. Democrat and Republican, white and black, are provided for in the matter of permission to attend, altho' the time's length is often prescribed by political intervention.

So, I ask again, "How are the schools to be kept out of politics when through all ramifications, from Governor down to teacher, the procedure for their existence is all through political channels?"

The public school is inseperably connected with politics and the attempt to ague it out is, in my humble opinion, a futile one.

NO VOTES FOR THE BABIES.

Better Baby Contest Will Be Conducted Upon Scientific Lines

The babies entered in the Better Babies Contest will not be put up before a crowd of people for votes or for favors. They will enter a quiet room with only mother and doctor present and will there be examined. The whole baby, inside and out, from head to foot! From these carefully marked points properly scored by capable men named by Prof. Smyth, of Kent county, the prize winners will be chosen. The baby will be designated by a number only until the finals are in the hands of the judges, when the names of the winners will be known.

There has been some misunderstanding about this and also about ages. We are permitted to announce now that babies of all ages will be scored, but prize winners will be selected from 6 months to 36 months only.

Do you love your baby?

Of course you do, and so does your neighbor who has no baby, and the crusty old bachelor who pretends he thinks babies a nuisance. Everybody loves a baby and that is why the better babies movement is the sensation of the present day. It's a real, fine plan for making sick babies well, delicate babies strong and well babies perfect. It is founded on sane higienic living for the baby.

Chestertown will have its first better babies contest at the Fair grounds in town on Tuesday, Aug. 26. The Kent and Queen Anne's Driving Association is conducting the great event with the co-operation of the following physicians:

Dr. Lee W. Thomas, New York.
Dr. H. Benge Simmons, of Chestertown, Md.
Dr. H. G. Simpers, of Chestertown.
Dr. Nurkin, of Betterton.
Dr. M. L. Maxwell, of Still Pond, Md.
Dr. Geo. Jones, of Galena, Md.
Dr. Elizabeth Whittaker Johnson, of Oklahoma.
Dr. E. A. Scott, Galena.

Several from Queen Anne's will also be present.

Take your baby to this new kind of a show whether you have entered it or not. Make up your mind any time before noon on Tuesday, the 26 of August, hunt up Mrs. Evelyn Harris or any of the doctors named above and you will be in line for the magnificent silver cup which Jefferson & Bro., of Chestertown, are going to give the champion baby. If he don't make that he will get a gold piece any way. The merchants from the two counties are all contributing towards it and the 1st prizes will all be gold pieces. 2nd prizes will be red ribbons. So it is up to the mothers to find out whether the baby is perfect, and if not why not. It's up to the fathers to see that the mothers are in town in time for it.

The doctors and good women instructed in the work, will be able to tell you by means of the better babies standard score card, under which your baby will be imagined, measured and tested. If it is perfect or nearly perfect any way the best baby in town it will receive a medal donated by the Woman's Home Companion, the silver cup, a $5.00 gold piece and a certificate of award which is suitable for framing, all stamped and with a gold seal, something which can always be proudly exhibited in years to come. Call up Mrs. Evelyn Harris for any other desired information. "Everybody's doing it now." There are 25 entries to date and many more on the way.

Dr. Lee W. Thomas, a specialist in diseases of children, from the staff of Bellvue Hospital, New York City, will be in Chestertown to attend the Better Babies Contest on August 26th, 27th and 28th. Dr. Thomas represents the New York Milk Committee and the Woman's Home Companion in spreading the gospel of Better Babies all over the country.

In addition to assisting with the examinations, he will talk to mothers on "What Constitutes a Prize-Winning Baby" and will explain to physicians and social workers the real idea of the Better Baby Contest and its uses to a community.

Two lectures for ladies will be given at 1 30 in the ladies tent. Prizes awarded 3.30 Tuesday in front of grand stand.
