EDW. PROCTOR KILLS HIMSELF.

Fear of Being Placed Under Arrest Drives Him To Suicide.—Provides Grandson With Funds First—He Had Trouble Last Sunday and Thought He Would be Indicted.

Fearing that he would soon be arrested on what was actually a trivial charge, Edward Proctor 63 years old, of Rock Hall, shot himself in the right temple early Tuesday morning in the sitting room of the Anchor Hotel 612 East Pratt street, Baltimore.

Coroner Hyde viewed the body and rendered a verdict of suicide.

When the body was found by Richard Benjies, proprietor of the hotel, it was lying full length on the floor.

In the room directly adjoining the one in which Proctor killed himself lay Leslie Sewell, his 14-year-old grandson, asleep. The youngster accompanied his grandfather to the city Monday afternoon, as he had done for a number of years past.

The boy did not know of Proctor's death until he was awakened Tuesday morning.

Richard Benjies occupied a room directly across the hall from the sitting room. He told Coroner Hyde that he heard the report about 5 o'clock in the morning, but believing it to be the exhaust on one of the many gasoline boats in the harbor paid no attention to it.

That Proctor contemplated suicide is believed from the statement he made Monday to Walter Tall, an old friend who resides at the hotel. Tall told the coroner that Proctor came to him at night and calling him by his first name, said:

"I have suffered from numerous sick spells of late and I am afraid that one of them will result in my death. If I do die while I am at the hotel I want you to take charge of my body and send it back to Rock Hall."

Love for the boy was the one thought the old man seemed to have had on his mind to the last. The boy, Leslie Sewell, told of the trouble that led his grandfather to leave home and take his life.

Last Sunday Proctor was mending a bicycle for the boy on the street in front of their home in Rock Hall. A man, whose name the boy says he does not know, approached and got into an altercation with the aged man and the latter picked up a monkey-wrench from the ground and leveled it as though it was a pistol. The man, young Sewell says, ran away and spread the story that Proctor had threatened him with a revolver.

Several days ago, the boy says his grandfather heard that the Grand Jury of Kent county would indict him for threatening the man. Monday Proctor, taking his grandson with him, went to Baltimore on his way to Elkton, Md., where he had secured employment on a mud dredger.

Maryland Workshop For The Blind.

If one were asked to name the places of interest in Baltimore, he probably would never think to include the Maryland Work for the blind, at 501 W. Fayette street; yet an hour spent in this institution would easily convince the visitors of its claim to a place in the list, for, besides the fact that all the workers there are sightless men and women, it is seldom that so many different industries are found in operation under one roof. Ever since 1853; a school has been provided for the blind children of our State; but those who lost their sight in latter life were, except the few cases that it was possible for the school to reach, left in idleness and dependence until the establishment of the worshop, about six years ago. The blind men and women of Baltimore and the counties gladly availed themselves of the opportunity thus offered to become self-supporting; and, under the wise management of Mr. G. W. Conner, who is himself without sight—and by the way, an Eastern Shoreman—the work has grown so rapidly that last year it was found necessary to build a large addition to the original structure occupied by the workshop. Now, about one hundred and fifty blind persons go there daily from their homes to work at broom-making, piano-tuning, chair-caning, mattress making, basketry, weaving, knitting, crocheting, sewing or hammock-making, according to individual talent and preference.

The workshop is an assured success; but its continued and increase success depends upon the recognition and patronage which it receives from the sighted people of the State. An artist cannot sell his pictures if no one knows that he can paint; a carpenter cannot obtain employment unless it is known that he wants it. The blind men and women are doing good work, and doing it most glad they cannot sell eveything that they can produce until their work becomes more widely known. To this end, some of Maryland's progressive towns have promised to lend a helping hand, and and we are pleased to state that Chestertown was the first to take up the cause. H. F. Jefferson & Bro. have kindly given space for an attractive collection of articles, every one of which was made entirely by hand and without the aid of sight. These articles are for sale, and orders for duplicates or for others to be made according to direction, will be promptly filled at the workshop. The collection includes so many useful and pretty things that we should not know which to select for mention here, but we hope that all who are within reach will go and see for themselves.

FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

SHOW COSTS REACH $1 EACH MINUTE.

Did you ever stop to think how much capital and brains are tied up in a modern circus such as the Downie and Wheeler Shows which will be here Sept. 3. The beautiful high priced horses, the costly and monster canvasses made up with tons of rope, the mammoth carved animal dens and wagons, the trains of modernly equipped double length railroad cars, harness, uniforms, costumes, trappings, the thousands of feet of lumber used for seats, poles, stakes, etc, and the goodness knows what all—Can you imagine the enormous sum tied up for the purpose of amusing you for the trifle you spend for a ticket—and then you don't have to pay anything for the expensive parade and high class free acts. Then think of the daily expenses which are over two thousand dollars—Don't it take real brains to manage an institution that has this expense to say nothing of the interest on investment, depreciation of property, etc. When the show comes just take a pencil and pad and try to "dope it out" and you will realize what a monster proposition it is. Don't forget the date, Sept. 3.

Wednesday, September 3, will be registration day. Those entitled to registration, whose names are not on the books, must avail themselves of this opportunity if they would participate in the primary election on September 8.
