The Van Ness Case.

A trial of great interest and magnitude which had been going on in Washington for some time past, has terminated for the present, in defeat of the widow's pretensions, under an instruction from the court to the jury, that if all the evidence adduced by her were true, there was not legal evidence of a marriage to Gen'l Van Ness. An appeal is to be taken to a superior court. In the mean time, her counsel have published a card, alledging the conduct of the court to be unprecedented &c. This is strange conduct on the part of counsel and is calculated to disparage the Bench in popular opinion. We venture to declare, that the power exercised by the court, is not only not unprecedented, but of frequent occurrence. The court do not usurp the power of the Jury, nor take from the citizen any right pertaining to a jury trial — Suppose a suitor, appears in court, and offer no evidence of the weight of a "limet's feather," would not the court on being called upon, tell the jury so?

Marriage is a compound question of law and fact! The law determines what legal requisites are evidence of a marriage! If no proof be offered "tending to prove" a marriage the, court are bound to say so, when called upon! If proof "tending to prove" a marriage be offered, the court cannot interfere with the jury's right of weighing the evidenceand determining whether the proof be sufficient to establish a marriage. There must be a "sufficiency in law," of which the court is the exclusive judge and a "sufficiency in fact" of which the jury are the exclusive judges. Each department is supreme in its jurisdiction or proviuce. The court assumed that all the testimony of the widow Conner or Van Ness was true, but being true, did not establish a marriage accordiug to the laws of Pennsylvania and did not "tend" to prove a marriage according to the laws of the land.

The Court of Anneals of Maryland in the cases of Davis and Barney and Cole and Hebb and others. 7. H. and J. and 9. G. and I. have defined the powers of courts and juries in cases, similar in principle, and we venture to assert that every court in Maryland, has done the same thing. We grant, that courts should always lean to the side of the jury and if there be any doubt at all should let the case go to the Jury and we believe this is the general practice of the courts, but to call the exercise of an undoubted right, an usurpation and unprecedented, is a strange preversion of terms. Our sympathies were with the lady, as they generally are, but the rights and powers of courts and juries are not to be determined by feeling.

Baltimore Papers.

The Clipper has been enlarged and comes out in a new dress It is a valuable penny paper, although wrongly twisted upon the Mexican war.

The Argus also appears in a handsome new suit.

The Western Continent, has also been treated to a new suit.

The Democratic Statesman, a new paper, edited by Mr. Vandeford, formerly of the Sentinel and afterwards of the Ray, and Mr. Adams, has recently been started in the city and is neatly and handsomely gotten up.

The Iris and Odd Fellow has increased dimensions and appears in new type.

The Whig Standard has been changed to the American Whig, and edited by B. E. Smith and Sam'l Sands, it is a thorough whig paper, and deserves the support of the whigs throughout the state.

The Patriot and American increase in circulation are the old standard papers of the city and are conducted with great ability.

The most fastidious, it would seem, can new be accommodated.

Fire.

The barn, corn house, stables, &c on the farm of Hugh Wallis, Esq., about 3 miles from Chester-Town, was destroyed by fire on Saturday morning last, with all their contents. Mr. W's loss is supposed to be eight or nine hundred dollars. It was, no doubt, the work of an incendiary.

Loss of Life.—We learn from the Cambridge Chronicle, that in the gale of the 17th ult. Capt. William Vickers, eldest son of Capt. James Vickers, of that county, aged 30 years, was lost, together with his crew. The deceased was overtaken by the gale whilst in the bay, and it is supposed his vessel sprung a leak; and all on pord found watery grave

COMMUNICATIONS.

To the Editor of the Kent News:

I cannot forbear this faint tribute which my feelings prompt to the memory of my old classmate and friend, John Ringgold Hynson. With the circumstances connected with his late recklessly bold and successful enterprise against the brig Creole, all are acquainted; for with it the presses of the country have teemed in admiration.—With all connected with the loss of himself and the gallant ship to which he belonged we are alike familiar—in the facts of each is found his highest eulogy—and all the efforts of fancy would but cast a vail over the brilliancy.

He went from among us when but a boy. But long years of absence, and the ever varying scenes, and reckless companionship of naval life were alike insufficient to suppress the ardor with which he ever regarded the house of his childhood: his pulse was ever high when homeward bound, and he cherished with pride his birth place.

Of his feelings I speak knowingly because accustomed to meet him on his returns with all the familiarity of school boy days, I have not unfrequently heard him give to them the most enthusiastic utterance. The bold young man was not ashamed of the feelings of the child. But why speak of these things, when the simple fact, that two brave and devoted fellows calmly resolved to perish with him speaks such a volume for his own warm heart as no pen can write.

The nation has poured out its tribute of pride and sorrow, and thousands who knew him not have called his name in admiration and grieved that the gallant, bold and generous youth should have gone down into the great deep e'er the echo of a people's praise had reached his ears.

To us among whom he lived and loved he shall return no more forever. But with the warm tear of friendship which we drop to his memory is mingled a pride which will never permit the bold daring of his life and the gallant and generous circumstances of his death to be forgotten.

To those who knew and loved him best the word of consolation may not yet be spoken—for to them is now the grief which knows no comforter; and yet could he but stand among them for a moment he would say: Weep not—'twas my pride to go down with the good old ship—I glory in the wave which was my winding sheet—and though no proud marble mark the spot I lie—mine is both the soldiers' and the sailors' grave.

LATER FROM THE ARMY.

ATTEMPT TO RECAPTURE TAMPICO.

Capture of Parras by Gen. Wool—Seizure of Government stores—Present position of American forces—Seven thousand Mexicans repulsed from Tampico - Capture of two hundred Mexicans, &c.

The steamer Fashion arrived at New Orleans on the 27th ultimo, form Brazos Santiago, which place she left on the 24th.

The New Orleans Times says:

We learn from a passenger just arrived from Tampico, on the schooner H. M. Johnson, and who came up to the city from this South west Pass, on the steamer Fashion, that on the 16th instant, Tampico had been attacked by 7000 Mexican cavalry, thinking to carry the place by a coup de main: our troops, however, were on the alert, and on their approach, opened onthem a brisk fire of artillery, when they broke and fled.

The garrison there had been reinforced by the Alabama regiment of volunteers and the second regiment of artillery, and Gen. Patterson was to have marched from Matamoras, on the 23d, with Col. Thomas' regiment of Tennessee cavalry, for that point Gen. Shields was in command at Tampico, but would be superseded by Gen. Patterson when he arrived

Great exertions have been making by Mexican officers to raise men in the small towns along the Rio Grande, and with some success.

Capt. Stone, with a detachment of seventy men, lately captured a party of two hundred Mexicans in a rancho about thirty seven miles up the San Juan, together with Capt. Cantove, by whom they had been recruited, and he and the men were taken as prisoners to Camargo. Fifty stand of arms, ammunition, &c., were taken at the same time. On the evening of the 16th a Mexican was taken by the guards at Camargo attempting to entire the powder magazine, with a design, it is supposed, of blowing it up.

The troops under Gen. Wool, Capt. Yeatman also informs us, are in the very highest state of discipline, and regard their commander with respect and affection. Parras he says, is a most delightful place; it is situated about seven miles west of the great San Luis Potosi road, and he terms it the vineyard of Mexico. The climate is unexceptionable, and the soil fertile, the grape is cultivated there, and the wine extracted from it is delicious.

Gen. Wool has received orders from General Taylor to take up his winter quarters at Parras, and had seized two thousand barrels of flour and several thousand bushels of wheat and other government stores. Parras, is one hundred and fifteen miles directly west of Saltillo, and the position being farthest in advance, the first and second regiment of Indiana Volunteers had been ordered from Camargo to reinforce Gen. Wool. This would swell his command to about four thousand five hundred men.—Gen. Worth, at Saltillo, was also to be reinforced by four companies of Kentucky cavalry, ordered to Monterey, which would bring his command up to about seventeen hundred men.

Gen. Patterson had received a private letter informing him of a rumor that Santa Anna was advancing upon Saltillo from San Luis Potosi, but Capt. Yeatman attaches no credit to the rumor, as he traveld from Parras and Saltillo to Matamoras as rapidly as possible, and when he left those places he heard nothing whatever of it. The Generals in com and at both points have cavalry parties scouting in the direction of San Luis Potosi, and the scouts of General are at least seventy five miles from his camp, so that he would be likely to be apprised of any movement of Santa Anna as early as possible.

Gen'l Taylor left Monterey on the 15th, with an escort of cavalry, for Victoria.—Gen. Twiggs and Colonel P. F. Smith, with their respective commands, were at Victoria, and previous to the departure of Gen'l Taylor from Monterey. Gen. Quitman with his brigade had left for that point. Gen'l Taylor, in a conversation with Captain Yeatman, expressed the opinion that it would be impossible to march upon San Luis Potosi from the northern extremity of his line until the rainy season sets in in June next.

The report that Santa Anna had cut off the water ranks between him and the American posts is not true, but the country is almost destitute of water unless during the rainy season, and in one part of the road there is even in that season a distance of 90 miles to be marched without the possibility of finding any.

Six American teamsters were killed recently at Ramos, a rancho of Canales, by a detachment of his ranchoros.

Gen'l Butler was in command at Monterey, with about two thousand men; Col. McKee, with six companies of the Kentucky regiment of cavalry, at Ceralvo, Capt. Willis, with two companies of the same regiment at Mier; and Gen. Marshal at Camargo, with about nine hundred men.

Col. McClung was fast recovering from his wounds.

☞The following is an extract of a letter from the New Orleans Delta, of the 22d. ult:

Off Vera Cruz, Dec. 9, 1846.

Messrs. Editors—One of the most afflicting calamities of the war occurred yesterday in the loss of the brig Somners, which foundered near Green Island, with the loss of Passed Midshipman Henry A. Clemsen and John Ringgold Hynson, and more than thirty of her crew. That any escaped is due to the humane exertions and intrepidity of the British, French and Spanish officers of the squadrons lying at Sacrificios, who witnessed the sinking of the brig; and notwithstanding the fearful height of the sea, and the rage of the gale, sent several boats each from the principal ships to the rescue. Twenty boats are said to have been out.

It was honorable to human nature to attempt such an undertaking, and their success must be regarded as a reward for their intrepidity, directly conferred by an approving Providence.

I hear the names of Lt. Tarleton, of H. B. M. frigate Endymon, and Lieut. Wood, mentioned in terms of the highest praise. But all acted bravely and nobly, with but little distinction individually.

Hynson was an ornament to the Navy of the brighest character. He had no superiors, except accidentally of rank, in his profession. His equals and superiors all loved him. A specimen of his gallantry has been shown in his partiripation in the recent cutting out or burning of the vessel under the castle, and I am told he could now have saved his life, but for his generosity in giving up his spar to a sailor whom he considered weaker than himself. In seeking another support he went down.

I knew him intimately, and can truly pronounce his the noblest mind and the warmest heart that I have ever yet found in the human breast. One of Mr. Hynson's brothers is a resident of your city. In deploring his sad bereavement, he can enjoy all the consolation that is to be derived from the reflection that half the officers of the Navy join in his grief, and also mourn a brother. * * * *

INDICATOR

Doings of Congress.

In Senate.

Washington, Jan. 4, 1847.

Many petitions and memorials were presented.

The President's message asking for a general officer was read and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs. The message, it seems, has been withdrawn for alteration. It does not say Lieutenant General.

The Senate is now considering a private claim.

House of Representatives.

Mr. Thompson, of Pennsylvania, rose and said if he had been here on Saturday, he would have voted for Wentworth's resolution against taxing tea and coffee.

Mr. King, of New York, moved to suspend the special order, to introduce a bill for furnishing the President with thirty thousand dollars to bear expenses of a mission to negotiate peace with Mexico, and two millions to enable him to effect the negotiation—slavery restricted in the Territory thus obtained. The vote on suspending the rules was—yeas 88, nays 89. So it was rejected.

Mr. Baily rose and made a personal explanation. Through the interposition of disinterested friends, all correspondence between him and the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. Davis) had been mutually withdrawn. He stated that he had not intended in debate to apply the terms "apologist and advocate of Mexico," to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. Davis rose and expressed his satisfaction at the explanation. He would no have acted as he had done, if he had so understood the gentleman from Virginia at the time.

Mr. Bayly rejoined in a few words, and the matter ended.

A message was received from the President and recommending an increase of field officers in the service, to take the places of the disabled, and the creation of an office to be called "General Officer" to take command of all the military forces during the war. It was referred to the Committee on Military affairs.

The bill to increase the Standing Army by adding ten regiments, was next taken up in Committee, Mr. Houston, of Alabama in the Chair.

Mr Haralson, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom the message in relation to a General Officer and other matters, had been referred, reported that the Committee had authorised him to ask that they be discharged from the further consideration of the same. The motion was agreed to.

Thus falls to the ground the favorite project of Messrs. Polk and Benton. It dropped like hot potatoes.

Correspondence of the American.

Washington, Jan. 2, 1847.

The rumors that the Secretary of the Treasury is determined to insist upon the repeal of the section of the Sub-Treasury law requiring the payment of all dues in specie, I imagine to be incorrect. Mr. Walker has held out neither hope nor prospects of such a modification of the law when his opinion has asked, and so far from this has used the strongest possible language to shew a different determination on the part of the General Government. There is even a recklessness of purpose and determination upon the part of the Administration in regard to all the great questions which now agitate the country.

The idea of borrowing the money necessary for carrying on the war with Mexico and of an obstinate adherence to the Sub-Treasury law would seem to be incompatible with every principle of good sense and just action; but rather than make a public confession of error, the Administration seems determined to sacrifice itself and the country in a common ruin.

The House of Representatives, you will observe, have taken a decided stand today against the imposition of a tax upon tea and coffee. Is not this giving "aid and comfort to the enemy?"

The Resolution was now adopted, yeas 115, nays 48: and by this vote the House decide that it is inexpedient to impose a tax upon tea and coffee.

Maryland Legislature.

Mr. Wickes presented a petition for refunding money paid by certain persons in Kent county to sell spirituous liquors.

On motion of Mr. Risteau, it was ordered that the Committee on Ways and Means inquire into the propriety of so modifying the act requiring deeds, &c to be written on stamped paper, as to make the same valid by paying the fee required by said act.

Mr. Spencer reported a bill relative to primary schools in Kent county.

An order was passed calling upon the Attorney General for an opinion as to the constitutionality of lottery agents.

Order were passed, directing inquiry into the expediency of a new assessment of real and personal property, and whether and what reduction may be made in the expenditures of the State.

Bills were passed in favor of E. L. Ford, of Cecil county, and incorporating the Sabbath School of Chester Parish, Kent county.

Messrs. Ware and Orrick presented petitions relative to the license law and the sale of spirituous liquors on the Sabbath, which, with petitions by Mr. Steck and Mr. Wickes, we referred to appropriate committees.

Orders were passed relative to the propriety of amending the stamp act to subserve public convenience, and calling for the vote on the biennial session bill.

M. Payne presented a petition signed by eight hundred and thirty five citizens of Baltimore county, for the passage of a law to enable them to pay their taxes immediately into the Treasury to avoid the tax for collection. Referred to the Baltimore co. delegation.

Mr. Done obtained leave to report a bill to confirm the act of last session providing for biennial sessions of the Legislature.

Mr. Orrick, to report a bill to amend an act regulating religious ceremonies of colored persons

Mr. Orrick offered an order, directing inquiry into the propriety of doing away with hanging and substituting confinement for life, which was adopted.

Licking Station, Ky. Dec 17th, 1846.

Mr. R. E. Sellers:—I have the pleasure to inform you that I have used in my practice your celebrated Vermifuge with the most happy results I have formerly used Fahnestock's but being persuaded to try yours, I have found it far superior in every respect, and can say without the fear of contradiction, that your Vermifuge possesses more virtue than any I ever used, and most cordially recommend it to the attention of the public. I will state a case where I gave one vial of your Vermifuge: My brother's child was pining and wasting to a mere skeleton; in 30 hours after I gave the Vermifuge, the enormous quantity of upwards of six hundred worms were passed. The child that was given up as lost, is now well and as hearty as any in the neighborhood
