KENT NEWS.

CHESTER TOWN, MD.

Saturday, April 10, 1847.

A BEAUTIFUL PHENOMENON.—On Wednesday night last, the Northern Lights were most beautifully displayed in the heavens; but the most remarkable sight was about half past ten o'clock, when the light gathered itself into a belt, running from east to west, and which divided the heavens equally. The belt was of the most brilliant white, and, though frequently changing its shape, maintained its character for some time.

THE STEAMER OSIRIS.—This favorite boat which has been running between this place and Baltimere, was sold a few days since to a gentlemen in Norfolk, from which place she will hereafter run in connection with other ports in Va. She sold for $12,500.

GEN. TAYLOR'S DESPATCHES.—The simplicity of Gen. Taylor's despatches, in regard to the Battle of Buena Vista, the entire absence of boasting, the studied silence in reference to the great master spirit of the scene, and the earnestness with which they are written, are evidences of the ability and greatness of the old Hero and soldier.

THE Louisville Journal says that when the news of the battle of Buena Vista reached Lexington, the Circuit Court was in session. Gen. Coombs moved that it immediately adjourn, in respect to the memories of Col. McKee, Lieut. Col. Clay, Capt. Willis, Adjutant Vaughn, and other officers and soldiers from Kentucky, whose blood was gallantly shed in battle, and that said names be entered on the records of the court which was done, and the court adjourned.

The Battle of Buena Vista.

INCIDENTS IN THE FIELD.

A letter in the New Orleans Delta, dated Buena Vista, February 26, speaking of the action on the 23d, says—

The Mexicans fought well, but wherever their superior numbers drove back our infantry, we were sure to see the artillery galloping through the ravines and checking them instantly; indeed, the artillery well deserve the name of "flying"—they appeared to me to be gifted with ubiquity—they were here, there, and every where at the same time. Captain Washington acted and looked as we may suppose his great namesake did before him.

Capts. Bragg, Sherman, and the other officers and men of the different batteries, did their duty nobly. Each arm assisted the other. Col. May, of the 2d Dragoons, and Captain Pike, of the 1st, were flying everywhere, as they were wanted. Capt. McCulloch's company was with them; his horse was shot under him; I was riding next to him, and offered him mine, but he soon had another.

Throughout the action Gen. Taylor was where the shots fell hottest and thickest, two of which passed through his clothes. He constantly evinced the greatest quickness of conception, fertility of resource, and a cool, unerring judgment not to be baffled. Gen. Wool was wherever his presence was required, stimulating the troops to activity and exertion. The operations of Gen. Lane were confined to his own brigade, (the Indiana,) and his efforts were worthy of better material for their application.—Major Bliss bore himself with his usual gallantry, having his horse, as at Palo Alto, shot in the head. Mr. Crittenden, a son of the Senator from Kentucky, was conspicuous in the field as volunteer aid to Gen. Taylor; and the Medical Director's assistant surgeon, Hitchcock, could be sometimes seen where the balls fell fastest, binding up a wound or dressing a broken leg, with true professional zeal; and anon galloping with the ardor of an amateur knight, conveying orders to different commanders.

During the battle, the second Kentucky regiment of infantry became closely engaged with the enemy's lancers. From the overwhelming number of the lancers, the Colonel, considering his regiment lost and about to be cut to pieces, despatched his Adjutant to Gen. Taylor, to say to him that "his regiment was completely surrounded, that he was fighting hand to hand, that in all probability he would be totally annihilated, and to ask Gen. Taylor what he should do."

General Taylor promptly replied to the Adjutant, (whose countenance was the perfect picture of despair) in the coolest manner imaginable, saying, "Go and tell your Colonel that he has got them just where he wants them, and now is the time to give them Jesse." Whereupon the Adjutant wheeled his horse clapped his spurs to him, dashed up to the little band, and shouted, at the top of his voice, "Boys, General Taylor says that we've got them just where we want them, and now's our time to give them h—ll." The intrepid Kentuckians caught the impulse like electricity, raised a cheer, and with their naked bayonets, in less time than I have been relating it, routed them completely and drove them from the field.

About half past 3 o'clock, on the 23d, when Santa Anna saw that his all depended upon his breaking Gen. Taylor's line, and silencing of Bragg's battery of six pounders, which had been pouring death and destruction into his ranks all day, he ordered one desperate charge of about five thousand infantry upon the battery. Bragg saw them approaching, and fearful from the overwhelming numbers, that he might lose his pieces, prepared to take another more defensible position.

The eagle eye of the gallant Capt. Mansfield, of the Engineer corps, saw at a glance, that the fate of the day depended upon Bragg's holding his position. He immediately rode up to Gen Taylor, (who, from his position, had not observed the movement,) explained the circumstances to him, and then said, "I beseech of you, sir, that you will not allow the battery to move!" "No, sir! no sir! not at all!" said the General. "Tell him not to move one inch, but to give them grape and canister."

While Bragg was slaying them, right, left and centre, General Taylor quietly rode up behind him without being observed, and in an undertone of voice, said "A little more grape, Capt. Bragg." Those few words so completely inspirited him and his men that they fired with redoubled vigor, and the result shows the effect of "a little more grape."

Gen. Taylor's Family.

Every thing relative to Gen. Taylor has now become of interest. He had passed a long and useful life in the military service of his country, distinguished himself on every occasion where his energies or genius was called into action, and yet had so studiously, it would seem, kept himself out of public notice, that, when he was brought into full view by his victories on the Rio Grande, at Monterey and Buena Vista, and could no longer escape recognition, the country, as a New York paper well has it, "is astonished to find it possesses such a man." As the signs of the times indicate too clearly to admit a doubt, that he is destined, if he lives, to be transferred by the suffrages of the people, to the highest civil position, where he will be enabled to illustrate the great qualities of a statesman, which his correspondence shows he possesses, there is a natural curiosity felt to know all about him. The following communication from a gentleman, who possesses the information on the subject, will tell us about the immediate members of his family:

To the Editor of the Baltimore Patriot:

So many erroneous statements with regard to Gen. Taylor's family are going the rounds of the newspapers, that I am induced to offer you the following, which is correct. Please request those who have circulated the statements above referred to, to insert this. ONE WHO KNOWS.

The father of Gen. Taylor was Col. Richard Taylor, of Virginia, an officer who served with great credit to himself through the Revolutionary war. After the war, Col. Taylor removed to Kentucky, where he distinguished himself in the Indian wars, and subsequently held many civil offices of trust and honor. He was one of the framers of the Constitution of Kentucky, and was a member of the electoral colleges which voted for Jefferson, Madison and Clay. Col. Taylor married Sarah Strother, by whom he had five sons—Hancock, Zachary, George, William and Joseph, and three daughters—Elizabeth, Sarah and Emily. Hancock, after serving in the war against the Indians in Ohio and Indiana, died a farmer, near Louisville, Ky. Zachary is "Old Rough and Ready." George died a farmer, on the old family place near Louisville. William died, a Surgeon in the United States' Army. Joseph, the only brother of the General, now living, is a Lieutenant Colonel in the army, who distinguished himself at the battle of Okeechobee, and has now the control of the Commissary Department in Mexico. Of the daughters—Elizabeth and Emily died leaving families. Sarah, the only sister of Gen. Taylor, now living, resides (as do most of his immediate family) near Louisville. Gen. James Taylor, of Newport, Ky., is not a brother of Gen. Taylor, but a cousin of the General's father. Gen. Taylor married a daughter of Major Smith, of the army, a citizen of Maryland. By her he had four children—three daughters and one son. His eldest daughter, Ann, married Dr. Robert C. Wood, a Surgeon in the army, now in Mexico. The second, Sarah Knox, married Col. Jefferson Davis, who has so distinguished himself at Monterey and Buena Vista. Mrs. Davis died several years since. The third daughter is still unmarried. The son graduated at Yale College about a year since. Gen. Taylor is of one of the oldest Virginia families, and is related to and connected with many of the distinguished families of that State—the Madisons, Lees, Taylors, Barbours, Pendletons, Conways, Taliaferros—numbering amongst their ornaments—Jas. Madison, Richard Henry Lee, John Taylor, of Caroline; Judge Pendleton, James and Philip Barbour, General Hunt, of Texas; Gen. Gaines, &c.

☞$1 notes of the broken "Farmers' and Millers' Bank" of Hagerstown, altered so as to read the "Bank of Hagerstown," are in circulation. They can easily be detected by observing that the good notes read "Hagerstown Bank," and the spurious "Bank of Hagerstown."

MILLERISM.—A suit has been commenced in Massachusetts and left for referees, to decide for the recovery of property valued at $45,000 but sold for $29,000, by a Millerite, under the persuasion that property ought not to remain in his possession.

DIED.

In Quaker Neck, of consumption Thomas Price, aged about 55 years.

Near Belle Air, on Wednesday last, Vincent Hatchenson.

In Worton, on the 4th inst. Miss Anna Hawkins.

In Worton, on the 1st inst., Phebe, daughter of Michael Lyzar, in the 28th year of her age.

The subject of this brief notice, as far as the writer knowledge extends, had never attached herself to any church previous to her last illness, but had expressed a desire in the presence of the writer, to become a worthy member of that church to which several of her relations and friends were members. As her disease was a lingering one and her illness protracted, she was thus blest with an opportunity of seeing how matters stood between God and her own soul. In examining this subject she was brought to see her true standing as a sinner before God. She at once put in her plea for pardon and salvation, and although worn down by disease, she continued day and night until some two or three days previous to her death, her Savior appeared unto her the fairest among ten thousand and altogether lovely. By her request the writer visited her, and we pointed her to the promises of the gospel here and the glory that awaited the faithful in heaven—that Christ had died to purchase it for her, she would exclaim; glory to God, through Christ I shall see them all. She continued in this happy frame of mind until she fell asleep in Jesus.

Happy soul thy days were ended,
All thy mourning days below,
Go by angels guards attended
To the arms of Jesus go

There will be an entire change of Programme. W. H. begs leave to state to the citizens of this place that they have performed in all the principal cities in the United States, to crowded and fashionable houses.

The concert that was to have taken place at Centreville this evening will be postponed until Monday next, on account of the urgent request of the Ladies and gentlemen of Chestertown to remain one night more. Tickets 25 cents. Children half price.

CHANGES OF WEATHER AND CATCHING COLD.—It should be remembered that a cough is always an evidence that some impurity is lodged in the lungs, which if not speedily removed, will most assuredly so irritate those delicate organs as to bring on inflammation of the lungs—a disease which we all know is the high road to consumption.

Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills are one of the very best medicines in the world for carrying off a cold; because they purge from the body those morbid humors which are the cause of coughs, consumption, difficulty of breathing, watery and inflamed eyes, sore throat, rheumatic pains in various parts of the body, and many other dangerous complaints. Three or four of said Indian Vegetable Pills, taken at night on going to bed, will in all cases give relief; and, if the medicine be repeated a few times, the blood will be completely purified, the digestion will be improved, and the body will be restored to even sounder health than before.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—The public are cautioned against the many spurious medicines which in order to deceive, are called by names similar to Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills.

The only original and genuine Indian Vegetable Pills have the signature of William Wright written with a pen on the top label of each box. None other is genuine, and to counterfeit this is forgery.

The genuine article is for sale by John Russell, Chester Town, and by agents, published in another part of this paper.
