WHAT TO EAT

Result of a Kent County Lady's Attendance on the Domestic Science Course at Maryland Agricultural College—How To Plan Our Meals.

We here give an article written by one of Kent's best farmer wives. It is the result of the information desired from a course at our Maryland College.

Usually about two hours before mealtime we ask ourselves the question "what shall we have for dinner?" We think and think and then have fried ham and eggs. After four hours more we begin to think of another meal, and as we are in a hurry we have fried tomatoes and potatoes!

In the fall the days are short put we should be able to steal a few minutes to consult our cookbooks and pocketbooks, to look over pantries and gardens and to write down menus. Why write them down? Just because we can use the same menus next week if we care to, and won't forget a single thing. I do this not because of a poor memory, but it saves time. The little details which mean so much will often slip away back in our brain and we have to go through a certain form of "house cleaning" before we can locate them, but if we had them all written down in handy books we could just glance at them and they would be fresh in our minds.

The subject of whom we are feeding ought to be carefully considered. A man working in a store does not need the same kind of food that a laboring man needs who is out-of-doors all day in the sunshine and fresh air. They must have about the same proportion of each kind of food, but the stockman calls roughage, something to make him feel satisfied, to take away that all gone feeling that would come about three hours after a meal. Oatmeal, cabbage, turnips, all are excellent.

Most every one eats too much meat. Once a day is plenty for most families, and if we to plan a little it is hardly likely that we will serve two kinds of meat, three kinds of preserves and four kinds of cake for supper.

A successful stock raiser will study out the kind of feed needed for his special kind of stock, and why does not the wife study out her problem in the same way? If we start on fats we will find them in butter, lard, nuts, chocolate and fat meats. A piece of bread and butter with a cup of chocolate sounds very simple, but when we take it to pieces we find that we have lots of good solid nourishment with very little cooking. Combined with fruit and cereal it is an ideal breakfast. Cocoa is not rich, for the fat has all been taken from the chocolate to make it. Some forms of indigestion can be helped by the use of cocoa, when chocolate cannot be used at all.

Sugar is one of the most familiar forms of carbohydrates. It is very concentrated, containing very little water. As sugar supplies our energy we can readily see why it is we do not need so much meat. The starcy foods also give us a considerable amount of carbohydrates. for the action of the cooking or the digestive juices changes the starch at once to sugar.

We ought to take the time to use more cereals than we do, and in using them the fireless cooker will be found invaluable. Rice is the simplest cereal we can use, for it contains so little woody material. Sweet potatoes have a little more of the woody fiber in them than white potatoes but their composition is the same aside from that. Consequently it is not well to use both in the same meal, nor should we serve turnips and carrots with them, as both contain so much sugar. For summer time I like the prepared breakfast foods, especially those made of wheat and rice. They are little more expensive than the other kind, but since our time is worth something I think it would pay us to use more of them.

Milk and eggs contain our muscle-building foods, also dried peas, beans and lentils. If we live where we have to buy eggs we consider them an expensive part of our diet, but where we have only to go to the henhouse to get them we don't think of the cost. And it is well we don't for then we would miss a great deal of the food we need. Even when eggs are high we ought not to discontinue their use, because they contain so much concentrated energy.

Dried peas and beans are excellent food for hard-working men, because they furnish a body or bulk to the food. Graham bread contains a great deal more of the roughage than white bread, for the bran is left in it. The bran scratches the walls of the stomach and makes the digestive juices run freely; for that reason it is very good for dyspectics.

Then we must use the mineral foods. Plenty of vegetables and fruits, fresh whenever we can get them. Lettuce, tomatoes, watercress and celery are especially rich in mineral matter and all can be used as they grow without having to be cooked over the hot stove. Turnips have a constipating effect, while new potatoes, roasting ears, cucumbers and tomatoes will act just the opposite. Cabbage, onions, turnips and kale contain a great deal of woody material and are invaluable to a farm housekeeper. Onions contain so much oil that they are a great aid to digestion, and if they are properly cooked certainly could not be objectionable to anyone.

When cabbage is properly cooked and served with a white sauce made of skimmilk it is a fine dish. We ought to use more white sauces and cream soups. Everyone knows that skimmilk is good for chickens and hogs, but somehow they don't realize the food value it has for the family. The milk after it comes from the separator has lost nothing but a small per centage of fat, so that the real food value is still there. It is a muscle builder and as it contains so much sugar it supplies us with energy too. When we use it as a food for baby and it comes up curdled we should not worry. We have just given him too much; the curd is the sign or disgestion. But if the milk comes up as it went down we had better see a doctor, as there is trouble somewhere. If milk does not seem to agree with a person often the trouble can be remedied if a soda cracker or a piece of bread is eaten with the milk.

In using egg with milk we must be very careful to stir it well, and not to use too much heat, or it will curdle and will not look attractive. Buttermilk is much more easily digested than sweet milk. Sweet milk is liable to cause constipation and billiousness, for it is all food with no roughage or waste.

A Good Kidney Remedy Is Like a Good Friend

I wish to tell of the wonderful results I have received from your noted Swamp-Root. I am fifty-eight years of age, well and healthy to-day, but there has been a time in my life that I was all run down and worn out. My kidneys were in a very bad condition and I suffered from lame back. I have tried other remedies but never got the results that I have received from Swamp-Root and I honestly believe that I owe my life to Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. I tell others that I could not live without Swamp Root in the house, for when I feel tired and worn out and my back not feeling right, I take Swamp-Root and I am feeling fine in a few days. I heartily recommend Swamp-Root the world over.

Very truly yours,
MRS. W. A. GRIFFIN,
