FOR GRAIN INSPECTION.

Senator Beck Will Support Bill Providing For State Supervision of Grain Inspection.

Senator Beck feels that he is in the Senate as a representative of the farmers of this section in particular and of the State of Maryland in general, and that it is his duty to serve their interest. Just now he is supporting bills which will go far toward improving the conditon of the Maryland agriculturist: One is to provide for a State grain inspector and the other to protect the farmer against loss when he ships his product to a commission merchant who either fails before he pays the farmer, or is dishonest and tries to "do" the shipper out of part, if not all; he owes for the merchandise purchased.

Grain Inspection Bill.

Senator Collier who introduced the Bill speaking of this latter proposition recently, says that he has instances come under his observation where the commission merchant went into bankruptcy and the farmer's product had been sold to satisfy the creditors to the entire loss of the farmer who had shipped him his merchandise. "The farmers of this State can ill afford a single loss of this kind," said the Talbot Senator, "and it will be the purpose of my bill to make such a catastrophe impossible." Senator Collier then explained that his bill will require commission merchants who do business in this State to give a surety bond of at least 5 per cent. of their gross annual business, this bond to protect the farmers who may be creditors of the commission merchant at the time of the failure against any loss for products consigned prior to the bankruptcy proceedings.

In the matter of the State grain inspector Senator Collier said the farmers are being dealt with unjustly in many cases—not always fraudulently or dishonestly, but frequently because the party who inspects the grain at the Baltimore port upon its arrival is not competent and does not understand the different grades of grain. For instance, some grain may be listed as No. 3 grade by the inspector, and when passed through the fan and properly handled it sold for No. 3 or No. 1. "Now, with a competent man to inspect the grain," said Senator Collier, "he will be able to distinguish the No. 1 or No. 2 from the No 3, when properly treated, and the farmer will then get his price for No. 2 or No. 1 instead of receiving pay for the No. 3 grade." Senator Collier contends that by making the grain inpector a State officer he will be both competent and reliable, and can afford to give the farmer full justice for what he ships, whereas, when the inspector represents the purchaser exclusively, as is now the case, he is sure to be partial to the people he represents, however honest he may be or however conscientiously he may try to perform his duties. Both these bills will be introduced by Senator Collier. He has given considerable time and study to them and believes they are now in such shape as to make objection impossible from any source.

The Hog Serum Bill.

Senator Collier has also gone a step further in the matter of supplying hog serum to the farmers. In the bill which he will introduce providing for the supplying of this serum to farmers at actual cost, and to have it applied by an expert employed by the State, Senator Collier hopes to eliminate hog cholera as a menace to hog raising in Maryland and restore it as a profitable avocation or farm department. Senator Collier has gone carefully into the matter of obtaining and preparing this serum at the Maryland Agricultural College, and is going over carefully with the president and officers of that institution all the details in order to determine whether or not there is any other method or facility which, were it employed, would make the cost of producing the serum still lower, and if so, to install whatever is necessary to work a further saving so that the serum may be supplied to the farmers at the actual minimum cost. "I am determined to see that the farmers, particularly the hog-raising farmers, of Maryland get this serum at the very lowest figure possible," said the Senator from Talbot county, "because, to eradicate cholera from the hog-raising industry will mean more money making for the hog-raising farmer and money saving to the people of the whole State by making the pork supply plentiful and thus lowering the prices to the consumer" Senator Beck is quite enthusiastic over these measures.

CORSETS HOLD WHISKY

New Style For Bootleggers In Oklahoma Calls For Eight-Quart Capacity.

MUSKOGEE, OKLA., Feb. 0.—The latest fad in bootleg society is the 29-quart jacket and the 16-pint corset This is a style for both men and women in smuggling and selling liquor.

The Federal prohibition enforcement officers today discovered a new design in the jacket, which apparently is the very latest out. It was found in a trunkful of whiskey which was confiscated. The jacket is made of canvas, doubled and sewed with stout thread into compartments just the size of a quart of whiskey. The garment is put on over the head, for which a hole is cut, and fits around the body. Then each compartment is filled with a quart of whiskey.

Over this the bootlegger draws on a complete outfit of clothing, from undergarments out, all a dozen sizes too large for him, but filled out by the whiskey jacket until he becomes a fine example of "after taking."

The corset is used on the same principle and with the same effect, except that it is on a smaller scale. Pockets are provided for 16 pints of whiskey, and a woman of ordinary build in wearing one of the corsets is made to look like the average fat woman.

TUBERCULOSIS NEWS

Mrs. M. E. Fountain, of Kent, Sends a Clipping From Denver News.

MRS. M. E. Fountain, of Kent, is in Colorado with her son, Brice, for treatment. She sends the following from Denver News:

The statement of one of the country's leading medical authorities on tuberculosis, to the effect that there is very little danger from infection of this disease, will come as a matter of extreme gratification to many sensible men, both in and out of the profession, who have long deplored the excited conditions of the public mind on this subject. The gentleman who makes this comforting statement is Dr. E. R. Baldwin, of Saranac Lake, who is a recognized specialist, and his assurances lose nothing of their value because they are referred to editorially and with approval, by the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Baldwin's conclusion is that "adults are very little endangered by close contact with open tuberculosis, and not at all in ordinary association," and he further says: "Qualify these statements as we may, it is time for a reaction against the extreme ideas of infection now prevailing. There has been too much read into popular literature by health boards and lectures that has no sound basis in facts, and it needs to be dropped out or revised." He believes that "the preachments about the danger of infection to adults in the present state of society are without justification from an experimental standpoint."

Is General View.

To all of which the Journal of the American Medical Association adds that these statements represent not one man's views, but what seems to be the growing conviction of the most progressive and thoughtful students of tuberculosis at the present time."

It is fortunate that the disclosures regarding the non-infectious nature of tuberculosis should come with the authority of one who is accounted a specialist on the subject, and that it should be vouched for by so high a medical authority as the Journal of the American Medical Association, since now there will be less room for skepticism and less opportunity for dissent. The medical journal referred to calls the prevalent attitude of the public thought on the subject by the appropriate, if difficult title, "Phthisiophobia," and commends Dr. Baldwin's advice to apply a check to this mania.

Deplorable Hysteria.

Those who have observed the campaign against tuberculosis which is now being waged by certain portions of the medical profession, will hardly care to deny that it has resulted in a deplorable hysteria, which has not done the country any good Earnest men and women have been beguiled by specious arguments of humanitarianism into lending their aid to a publicity campaign that was ostensibly intended to warn the public against the ravages of the disease, but which has served only to spread in the thought and hearts of hundreds of thousands a paralyzing fear that never should have been created.

Members of state legislatures have been impressed in many instances by the dramatic and highly colored accounts of the dangers of tuberculosis, furnished by over-zealous advocates of radical repressive measures. This has sometimes resulted in proposals to appropriate large sums of the public money to build tuberculosis hospitals Under the spur of what now proves to be an unwarranted fear, lawmakers have been urged to pledge the state to unthought of expenses, in order to treat all who might be thus afflicted.

Wild Laws Debated.

It has even been proposed to enact legislation which would clearly be unconstitutional. It has been proposed to give to state boards of health unlimited authority to enter the home and forcibly remove tuberculosis patients to state hospitals, where compulsory treatment would be administered. All of which has been justified by the advocates of these drastic measures on the grounds that the danger of infection was so great as to demand such action.

Now that the medical profession has modified its view about tuberculosis and its menace to the public health as a transmissible disease, perhaps the revelation, or confession, whichever it may be, has come in time to save a good many heart ache and further spreading of the debilitating fear which has hitherto accompanied the publicity campaign. Perhaps, also the lawmakers, who have been stirred to unwonted depths of benevolent desire to guard the public health, may conclude that great expenditures of the state money to protect citizens from a disease that has no serious infectious character would be poor economy, to say the least.

READING is to the mind what exercise is to the body. As by the one health is preserved, strengthened and invigorated; by the other, virtue (which is the health of the mind) is kept alive, cherished and confirmed.—Addison.

Books in the home are cheaper than extravagance in dress. They are cheaper than the patronage of saloons; and a wise use of newspapers in connection with the reading of good books, is of the highest value to the scholar.—J. Clinton Ransom.

Good reading will improve and instruct the mind, delight the imagination and perfect the character.

AS OTHERS SEE US

A lady bought a skirt one day,
My thoughts of it ran just this way:
Did the makers have saving in view?
We wish they'd thought of modesty, too!

They might have put in the back a pleat,
And closed the seams about the feet;
Why will vain fashion over-ride
All common sense and modest pride?

We'll buy ready-made skirts no more,
But get our goods right from the store;
We'll make a skirt that you'll admire,
And hope to hear no more satire.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of our dear loved one, IDA P. MOFFETT, who departed this life five years ago, Feb. 12, 1909.

Oh dearest, sweet mother,
Since you have passed away
It seems not it was five years ago,
But only yesterday.

Where'er we speak your loving name,
Our eyes with tears are wet;
Oh; mother, how we loved you,
And love cannot forget.

BY HER CHILDREN, ELLA AND VICKERS.

Five sad and lonely years have passed,
Since our dear daughter breathed her last;
Oh, how we miss thy voice we loved so well
Only the parents hearts can tell.

No more shall we see her form so dear,
No more shall her voice our hearts cheer,
But hope sweetly whispers in accents of love,
We shall meet our dear daughter in heaven above.

BY HER MOTHER AND FATHER.

Call not back the dear departed,
Anchored safe where storms are o'er,
On the borderland we left her,
Soon to meet and part no more.

Far beyond this world of changes,
Far beyond this world of care,
We will meet our loving sister,
In our Father's mansion fair.

BY HER SISTERS AND BROTHERS.
