HIS 'PERFECT BRIDE' A SUICIDE, HUSBAND SAYS

Longfellow's Grandson Insists Mrs. Dana's Drowning Was not 'a Horrid Accident.'

Mrs. Edward Dana, wife of the Prof. Dana, formerly a teacher at Washington College, committed suicide last week by drowning. Her husband got an outfit and buried her himself. The following account is from the North American dated Boston, June 20:

In a remarkable statement to the newspapers, Edward Trowbride Dana, grandson of the poet Longfellow and assistant professor at the University of Minnesota, declares that his wife's death in the ocean at Nantucket on Thursday was an act of her own choice, "and not a horrid accident."

Mr. Dana was married to Jessie Holliday three years ago by a justice of the peace, according to a sample ritual, which they themselves arranged. Mr. Dana called her "the perfect bride." Both were Socialists.

Mrs. Dana had not had heart trouble," her husband said. "She had tried suicide before, but had lost her nerve. She has always held the old stoical idea that it is more dignified to die of one's own will than to leave the hour and manner of one's death to circumstances. Being freed from supernaturalism, she did not share the conventional morbid fear of death nor the notion that sucide in all circumstances is wrong

"Suicide shows an erroneous courage, especially for an intellectual person, and a considerable amount of skill, while accidental drowning is usually due to weakness, stupidity, clumsiness or loss of nerve, which is the reason, I suppose, that people always prefer the latter explanation."

Discussing the reason for his wife's act. Mr. Dana says:

"For years before our son was born she had set her heart on doing the thing just right. This was the keystone of her life after we were engaged.

"After her son was born last July, for some inexplicable reason she lost faith in her ideas in diet and began to eat more than usual, eating between meals and from a sense of duty when she was not really hungry. For this and other reasons she became run down and began to worry—which is fatal.

"She was really too highly strung to make a perfect mother, but she would have made a splendid mother had she got use to the responsibility. She underwent a continual mental torture of remorse for having, as she considered, bungled her work by allowing herself to get ill.

"Feeling that her life as a mother, the most important thing in the world, had not been perfect, she was absolutely heart broken and felt that the only thing to do was to commit suicide.

"Our life together has been a beautiful comradeship and has now had a tremendously tragic but beautiful end."

Mrs. Dana was the daughter of a rich English coal operator. She turned to socialism, wrote her own "ethical marriage" ceremony and was the bride in an open air marriage on the lawn of the Longfellow estate. She leaves a baby boy.

Thus the sensational romance of Jessie Holliday Dana came to a sorry ending.

The smiling little English girl who came to America some years ago to become the wife in Socialist fashion of Edmund Trowbridge Dana, grandnephew of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow lies in a plain pine box in a rude grave in the Newtown cemetery at Nantucket.

Less then 24 hours had elapsed after she ended her life in Nantucket harbor when she was buried,

No mourners save her husband—outwardly unperturbed—went with the body on its last, lonely journey. No service, no word was spoken over it.

And when the last clod of earth struck upon the coffin, a tiny piece of broken slate with the words "J. H. D., '84-'15 Jessie Holiday Dana. Little Comrade," scribbed on it, was all there was left to tell the story.

Dana, the husband, placed the rude stone there: scribbled the words. Then he gathered wild flowers and strewed them over the fresh mound, placed a rough hewn stone at its foot, a red geranium at its head.

Jessie Holiday Dana was at rest.

Dana took full charge of the burial.

He called the undertaker, waived aside the offer of a hearse, preferring an ordinary wagon; had the body put in the plain box, and himself, with only the undertaker and an assistant, trundled it off to the little cemetery.

Mrs. Dana would not have wished any ceremony; any elaborate funeral, he said. She received none.

A FINE YACHT.—The Jorosa, the magnificent new motor yacht of B. B. Friedenwald, the flagship of the Maryland Yacht Club was in Chestertown harbor last Friday afternoon. Jorosa is one of the largest power yachts in this country. She is of steel constrution, 110 feet long over all and 103 feet on the water line. Her beam is 17 feet 6 inches and her draught is 6 feet, she is finished throughout in mahogany and teak Gielow and Orr were her designers. She was built by Lawley in 1908. Her dining room is 25 feet long and is said to be the most richly furnished in the country. She cost $110,000 and takes $18,000 a year for running expenses. Mrs. Edward A. Tyler was the chaperon of the party aboarp.

IN MEMORIAM.

In sad but loving remembrance of our dear father, JOHN M. RODNEY who departed this life June 13th, 1915.

Father has crossed the river,
He is with the angels now:
He has laid aside earth's burdens,
And the crown is on his brow.
Daughter AGNES.

Lonely the home and sad the hour,
Since our dear father has gone,
But oh, a brighter home than ours,
In heaven is now his own.
Daughter CARRIE.

Farewell, dear father, tis a solemn word,
Which thrills through every heart,
But oh it is the will of God
That dearest ones should part.
Daughter EMILY.

Often from my heart comes a bitter cry:
Why, oh why did my dear grandfather die?
Then comes the answer so solemn and sweet
Your dear grandfather is only asleep.
Loving granddaughter ROSE.
