Report of Analysis of Quick LIME

DELIVERED by Messrs Ermentrout at my farm. The specimens were taken with my own hand from a number of cart loads after they were deposited in the field, and the sample was a fair representation of the whole:

Lime weight of, as pure Lime, or Oxide o Calcium,	60.37
Magnesia weight of, as pure, or Calcined Magnesia, or Oxide of Magnesia.	22.38
Potash and Soda,	01.00
Iron and alumina, or clay,	06.60
Silica, or sand,	01 10
Silica acid, or soluble silica,	03.00
Bone earth, weight as Phosphate of Magnesia,	00 40
Loss. supposed to be carbonic acid and water,	05.15
	100

REMARKS—Every hundred bushels of this Lime contains Phosphates about equal to one bushel of Bones When bones are dissolved and infinitely divided, it is said that the immediate effects of one bushel is equal to four; if so he value of these phosphates is more than one bushel.
