HEROISM REWARDED

Miss Lucy Branham, a Washington College Girl, Voted a Carnegie Medal—A Graduate of Class of 1911.

Notified of her selection as one of the recipients of a Carnegie medal for heroism, Miss Lucy Gwyn Branham, daughter of Mrs. John H. Branham and neice of Dr. Joseph H. Branham, 2200 Eutaw Place, Baltimore, is awaiting the arrival of the bronze medal and check for $1000 which have been voted her.

Miss Branham, who is young and pretty, was teaching school at St. Petersburg, Fla., last January, when two girls were nearly drowned in the surf. Three men plunged out to rescue them and Miss Branham was attracted by the cries. Not only did she reach Miss Tyrl Nelson, one of the girls in distress, before the men, but she brought her ashore. Meanwhile one of the men was drowned, and Miss Branham plunged back into the water to aid in rescuing a companion of the drowned man.

As she was starting for her classes at Friends School Miss Branham declared she was very much surprised that her act had been rewarded, as she had thought of it as heorism. She has learned that because of her assistance in raising a fund for the widow and children of the man who was drowned at the time of her daring rescue of a friend, her Florida friend put her name and the story of her bravery before the Carnegie heorism board.

Although born in Princess Anne, Va., Miss Branham is well-known in Chestertown where she attended Washington College for four pears and graduating in 1911 She attended Johns Hopkins for two session and received the degree of master of arts. She now is thinking of spending the Carnegie money for further purposes of education. In fact, she says, there is a string tied to the disposal of the sum and she will not be allowed to spend it in any way that would be incompatible with the principles back of the Carnegie fund.

Miss Branham related modretly but eutertainingly her share in the Florida episode and declared she had often helped persons distressed in the water.

The wedding of Miss Emma Bascomb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Davis, of near Still Pond, and Mr. Bert Winfried Anspon, took place on Thursday, Nov. 11th, at "Elmwood," the home of the bride's parents. Full particulars next week.

THE successor to Stephen A. Cohee, keeper of Poole's Island light station, was appointed Tuesday in the person of Mr. Amasi J. Simpson, of Harford county
