CURING HAMS

KENNEDYVILLE, MD., NOV. 22, 1915.
EDITORS OF THE KENT NEWS:
GENTLEMEN

I enclose a letter of Samuel Townsend which contains a receipt for curing hams that I have used ever since the letter was published and recommend it highly. The letter is also quite a curiosity, as Mr. Townsend was quite a character in his day.

Yours Truly
E. B. PENNINGTON.

MR. C. P. JOHNSON:—I send your for publication in your paper one of the most valuable receipts for putting up meat, and as it is now near the time farmers and others put up meat, by following the directions I herein give, they no doubt will have far better hams and shoulders than a great many of them have been in the habit of having, or being able to buy as pretended sugar-cured hams, put up by Western butchers before the animal heat is out of the hog.

My receipt is as follows, particularly for pork, although it is equally good for beef by the addition of a little more saltpetre.—After the hogs are killed and cleaned let them remain until the next day for the animal heat to get out; then cut up and take a clean hogshead, cask or barrel, and for hams and shoulders use fine salt, either Ashton's or any other good brand; sprinkle the bottom of the hogshead, cask or barrel with said fine salt; then lay in hams, skin down, until the bottom or one course is laid; then sprinkle again with salt, and so on each course of hams until they are all in; the spaces, or where the hams do not stow well, some hocks may be put in said vacancies. After the hams are all in, go right on with shoulders, treated same as hams, until the hogshead, cask or barrel is filled. (What I mean by light sprinkle, is light salting). Then, for a hogshead that will hold one thousand pounds, take 2½ gallons of the best New Orleans molasses, 2 pounds of the best black pepper, and 1 pound of saltpetre; put these all in a clean barrel or tubs

Then put in fine salt and add water and stir until the salpetre and molasses are dissolved and the pickle is strong enough to float a potato or an egg; then pour on the meat until it is covered with said pickle; then let it remain four weeks to a day: then take up, wash the pickle off, hang up, smoke to suit the taste, and you will have such meat as probably you never tasted the like before. The same proportion of molasses, pepper and saltpetre for larger or smaller quantities, but in all cases use fine salt for salting and pickle. In making pickle, skim off all froth that arises whilst stirring. In putting up meat by this process you never run any risk of its spoiling by change of weather. I have told a great many persons how to put up meat, and now I give the public the advantage of this cheap, plain valuable process to make good meat, and if the newspapers would pass it around for the benefit of great numbers of its subscribers, they would be deserving of their patronage, &c.

MATTICE CO. TO BE HERE AGAIN

Miss Lois B. Hammond To Star In Interesting Dramas

THE CO. IS VERY POPULAR HERE

"Sunday" To Be Played Monday, Dec. 6, While The Whole Week Will Be Taken Up With Plays That Are Worth Seeing.

That ever-popular dramatic company, the Mattice, will appear at the Lyceum Theatre on Monday next for a week's engagement, with Miss Lois B. Hammond, certainly one of the best actresses that ever appeared here, starring.

The company will present for the first time here Monday evening Ethel Barrymore's greatest success, "Sunday."

The Mattice Stock Company needs no introduction to the amusement lovers of Chestertown. They are a good, clean-cut aggregation, and every member of the company is an artist in his or her line.

Eleven people constitute the company this season. Each and every play will be mounted with special scenery and beautiful costumes, and high class vaudeville will be presented between the acts.

MISS LOIS B. HAMMOND

The opening play—"Sunday"—has clean comedy and intensely dramatic situations, which have made it a leader among dramatic love stories. There is no slap-stick acting; no shoot, knock-down and drag-out actors, but real people of refinement to play their respective parts. It is, moreover, a play of real life and the dramatist has placed his characters in the midst of a very possible series of complications that are as dramatic as they are pathetic.

Other plays to be presented during the week are "Smith, Smith and Smith," "A Wife's Secret," "The Tie that Binds," "The Wolf," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" and "An American Girl."

The prices are 10, 20 and 30 cents which will prevail for the first half of the week and 15, 25 and 35 cents for the last half.
