WHEN IT'S MARDI GRAS TIME IN NEW ORLEANS

BY W. MACK REICHE

The Charity Hospital.

There isn't much of a drawing-card appearance in a hospital's sign of welcome, but I really believe that one does feel better for having seen the New Orleans Charity Hospital, for this institution ranks as one of the most efficient of its kind in the whole country. Moreover, it is the consequent of a very philanthropic antecedent: In 1745 Don Andres de Almonaster y Roxas, (whose fathere's hobby was short names) the wealthies citizen of Louisiana, contributed $114,000 towards building a hospital. This first hospital was the father of the Charity Hospital of today.

The Last Place on Earth.

From the hospital to the cemetery is but a short step—sometimes, but an invitation to visit "the last place on earth" does not necessarily carry with it an ill-will of the inviter. Therefore, if you ever have a chance, be sure to visit the New Orleans cemetery—the grave-yard different!

As it is impossible to dig much below the surface without finding water, the custom of burying in vaults, or "ovens" obtains. These vaults rise in tiers about 10 feet above the ground line. The poor and the Jews, however, bury below the ground.

Hallowed Ground, mounds and monuments were never meant for entertainment, so, with bowed heads and a blessing, we'll pass out and on till a glimpse can be had of the all-inspiring spires of St. Roch's Chapel.

This edifice is not only a Chapel, but a Shrine as well—the most picturesque in New Orleans. It is claimed to have been erected in 1871 by Father Thevis, with his own hands, in fulfillment of a vow, that if none of his parishioners should die during the epidemic (yellow fever, I believe) of 1866-7 he would build a Chapel in thanksgiving to God. The place he chose as a site he called Campo Santo (Holy Field)

This Shrine is sought by pilgrims from everywhere, for it seems to have acquired the prestige of the miracle working shrines of Europe. Tapers, the offerings of devout pilgrims, are always burning before the altar.

The bell in the odd tower is tolled every morning, and every Monday morning mass is offered for the repose of the souls of all those interred within the consecrated grounds.

"A devout young girl,"—so says tradition—"who wishes to marry well will perform a 'Novena.' That is, for 9 days in succession she will walk bare-footed from her home to the shrine, bearing a lighted taper, and there make her prayer to St. Joseph, the patron saint of marriage,

"However, a fleeting glimpse of pink toes thru the tiniest bit of a slit is almost as effective as bare feet."

The French Quarter.

"A transplanted niche from lands across the sea."

The tiny streets of the French Quarter (Vieux Carre), and the red-tiled, low, stone buildings which line both sides of these odd streets—how quaint, and yet how cunning! Everything so time-worn, and old-fashioned as to make it seem improbable that modern America is but a few short blocks away.

When in this Quarter look out for the corner-post and see the printed death announcements, black-bordered, tacked thereon. But be careful lest the odd-looking, two-wheeled carts of the milk venders give you an unexpected thump. Should you deal with a Creole and the cost of your purchase be a picayune, give him a nickel; if a quartee, half a nickel; but, on leaving, he will place in your hand a lagniappe—a gift which each storekeeper makes to each purchaser.

Should the old restaurant in front of you tempt the inner man beyond the power of endurance, step in. If the appetite isn't appeased, the curiosity will be, for you may choose from concoctions of all kinds—Creole, Genoa, Barcelona, Marseilles, etc

Notice along the way the Hispano-Moresque style of architecture and the exquisite wrought-iron balconies—traces of the Spanish regime.

All these things are but "visual evidences of a past thru the various epochs in the history of continental United States."

Buy an Up-To-Date Low Corn King Spreader

PLEASE note that in the Low Corn King the box is narrow—only 45 inches in width. The Low Corn King can be driven into a modern barn and loaded directly from the stable. That saves work.

The spread is eight feet or wider. That shortens the unloading time. The manure is thrown well beyond the wheels. That enables the driver to match up the edges of his strips without driving on manure-covered ground. You know what a big advantage that is.

The manure gets two thorough beatings. It lands on the ground in a finely-pulverized condition. The soil immediately takes up the fertilizing properties. There is no loss or waste of valuable fertilizing material.

Buy an up-to-date, wide spreading Low Corn King spreader from the local dealer.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and removes dandruff. It is excellent for falling hair and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.
