WASHINGTON COLLEGE DESERVES CREDIT

Philadelphia, Pa.
November 18th, 1916.

A good many years ago (far more than I care to reckon) it was my pleasant privilege to be a member of the graduating class of Washington College. We were all very proud of the fact that we were the Centennial class. Since that time Rivers, Hessey, Smith, Perry, Hines and possibly other members of the class, all fine fellows and dear to me, have matriculated in the School of Schools and have answered the roll call of the greatest of Teachers.

My life at the College was a most delightful one and also my relation with the good people of the town. Chestertown has always occupied a very warm place in my heart. At my graduation I was quite sure that I would visit the college often—certainly not less than once a year, at the commencement season. Strangely enough, however, "conditions over which I have had no control," have made it impracticable for me to be away from business in June, with the result that my last sight of Washington College and Chestertown was on a delightful summer's morning in 1876 when I took the steamer "George Law" or "Chester," for my Somerset County home, by way of Baltimore.

My heart, however, has always warmed to the college and its surroundings and when I accidently learned last Saturday afternoon, at dinner in my Norwood home, that the Washington College football team was to play the Pennsylvania Military College that afternoon, I was not long in boarding a Chester trolley for the ball grounds, some five miles distant.

It was a very real pleasure to me to meet at the game a few former residents of Chestertown. Among the loyal rooters for Washington College were Lewis W. Wickes, who had come all the way from Baltimore, and George Perkins, who had come down from Philadelphia. Their enthusiasm was intense and they followed the game with the closest interest from beginning to end.

Although Washington College did not win, yet the boys had no cause to be ashamed of the game they played. It is true that they were somewhat weak along certain lines, but in others were all that could be desired; but for trick plays (perfectly legitimate) on the part of the Military College, it is almost certain that the game would have been a scoreless one. Even as it was, the contest was most stubbornly fought and every member of the team acquitted himself with credit. I have seen a number of great football games played between our leading universities and yet I am free to say that I feel sure if our Washington College boys could have the experience of the expert and long-continuing coaching received by the players of Princeton, Yale and other universities they would be able to give a first-class account of themselves against any team they might meet.

It occured to me that the team might possibly be heartened a bit by this word of commendation from an old-time student of the college.

Very sincerely yours,
H. R. Ford.

CHRISTMAS HINTS

EDITORS AND READERS OF NEWS:

As the Christmas time again draws near I too am wondering what can be done in these times when food stuffs have gone sky high. If I give a few suggestions via the KENT NEWS it may help some one.

Necklaces and long neck chains are now the present fad, and we are making them of seeds and beads, the work is very simple to do, and beads of some sort are to be found in most homes, so look about you for suitable seed, and and get busy, with dark seed use white or light colored beads, and visa versa. I have made some of the long chains with silver beads that I pulled off from bead trimmings of an old evening gown, the seed I gathered while at the sea shore last summer. They are the big variety brown moon flower seed. Also used the china tree seed but the latter require a good half day to prepare, but when done they are a lovely purple color and make handsome chains when strung alternately with gold beads.

For necklaces select some small dainty looking seed, its a good way to exercise your artistic taste and when the work is done, its handsome, and your friends will appreciate it.

In collecting the seed, take them if you can just before they are quite ripe, otherwise they will need to be softened in hot water removing the minute they are tender enough to pierce with the needle. Listen, if you chance to have any bright colored seed boil them in a strong salt brine and must be taken out of it the minute they rise to the surface.

That reminds me of chidings I sometimes get, for as a well meaning friend once said to me, that is telling all you know, when I gave the receipt I had to a stranger for bleaching Sea Shell that she had gathered to make a portiere at Miami; if it suited me, she ought to be licked to death. Suppose I did have to pay good money for my knowledge it does not hurt my conscience a bit to be put others, neither does it cost me a cent to do so. So fail to see where I am especially generous either dollars are not all the realm in life, though I never lack or want. If I had any there is no secrets in my surrounds, so what's the use.

Give, give is a divine injunction, why don't we heed it more? Now do not take me for an extremest, I fully believe in a reasonable remuneration in all things consistent with labor, but where I know helpful things and the other one doesn't, will I guess then I do tell all I know.

We are having most beautiful weather and I run down to the seashore quite often, it is only 17 miles away. No child enjoys collecting shells more than myself, but I must wish you all a merry Christmas and stop short,

Mr. Watson, like thousands of other merchants, is saving moremoney by using a VIM. He writes in part as follows:

"Gentlemen:—I formerly employed a number of horses and wagons but I am now making my deliveries with one VIM truck. I should say it will easily do the work of two horse and wagon outfits, and costs about the same as one horse and wagon."
