Rheumatism After His Days' Outing

Hunting Trip on a Wet Day Brings Painful results.

Once upon a time Charles Mullen, of Philadelphia, went gunning. It was a dismal rainy day, and long exposure to cold and wet brought on a severe attack of rheumatism. He was confined to his home.

A friend recommended Sloan's Liniment, citing his own case as evidence of its effectiveness. Mullen bought a bottle and applied it to his aching limbs. Soon improvement was noticed and he was able to return to business.

Mr. Mullen writes: "Since that experience I have never been without Sloan's Liniment in the medicine chest." You will find it soothes bruises, sprains, toothache and relieves lame back, neuralgia, in fact all external pains. At all druggists, 25c, 50c, and $1.00 a bottle.

The dehorning of cattle is so beneficial in results and so generally practiced that it is not thought a dangerous operation, but only a trifling matter. That much risk does attend it was brought home forcibly when Friday afternoon Mr. Charles L. Shockley had some registered Guernseys dehorned, part of them at his own stables in town and part on the farm of W. E. Bowman at Wesley Station. When night came the bleeding seemed checked and nothing alarming had developed, but by morning a 20 months' heifer had bled so freely that she died during the forenoon, and two other cows in milk were terribly weakened and were with difficulty saved.

The heifer which died had been imported from the Island of Guernsey, and Mr. Shockley had been offered and refused $200 for her.

A CLOSED SUNDAY

The merchants of Chestertown have agreed to close their places of business entirely on Sunday. This applies to the delivery of meats and provisions on Sunday morning, a custom which has become very much abused. Now it is up to the townspeople to co-operate by giving orders as early as possible on Saturday to insure the delivery of goods on the same day. Merchants complain of the fact that many patrons wait until late Saturday evening to order goods, especially meats, hence the custom of Sunday morning delivery, in many instances.

The Wichita Daily Eagle, Kansas, is before us, sent by a former Kent countian. Here is part of an editorial headed "The West Did It."

"The West did it At this hour there is very little chance that Woodrow Wilson will lose the presidency. And his election he owes entirely to the great and boundless West. For the South voted its generations-old prejudices, and the East voted as it was told to vote, by powers fortified in financial citadels, and by other and more sinister powers from across the sea.

"But the great West voted its convictions. The western farmer carefully read his daily paper, and his farm weekly. As he harvested his crops and planned for the next year his mind was busy with the political questions of this momentous campaign. But he was not content merely to read and ponder; conscience entered into the casting of his vote, and many a devout farmer of Kansas, or ranchman of Colorado, or cattleman of Wyoming, or fruit-grower of California, prayed to his God for guidance before his vote was cast.

"And on Tuesday the great West gave in its answer. Calmly and with deliberation, and with a grave regard for the future of the nation and of his loved ones, the westerner cast his ballot—and his wife, beside him, caste hers.

"There could be but one result. A campaign of mere negation could not attract the West. The West has ideals as well as a conscience. Back in the East it is the fashion to jeer at Woodrow Wilson's idealism. Great editors sneer at his demand that the United States stand for the rights of humanity, as well as for our own national rights and privileges. The Republican campaign, to the West, seemed to be a campaign only of big guns and of superdreadnaughts and of the use of force against an erring and helpless neighbor nation. The heart was left out of it; it was a crass materialism that the West instinctively rejected.

"And so the West turned to Woodrow Wilson. The West voted for him in spite of many reservations. It chose him, however, as in all respects the more progressive of the two candidates."

Special meeting of Fairlee Grange on Nov 22. Mrs. Tilghman Hudson will have charge of Garner; Mrs. Ida Lee the literary program, and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Skirven the music.

CHURCH NOTES

Everybody-go-to-Church-Day in Chestertown was a grand success. All the churches felt the effect of the effort. A striking illustration was given when Postmester Bowers walked into Christ M. Judge Adkins, Talbot county chairman of the Diocesan Committee on the Church Pension Fund, has issued a letter to communicants of the Episcopal churches in the county asking for contributions to this fund. The ultimate aim of the committee is to raise the amount apportioned to the Diocese of Easton of the $5,000,000 fund. Judge Albert Constable is the diocesan Chairman. Under the plan proposed no clergyman of the church who is obliged to retire because of age or infirmities will receive less than $600 a year.

With the payment of the last bill by the committee Monday morning the evangelistic campaign by the three Methodist churches in Easton officially closed. The total receipts were about $330. Nearly a hundred conversions were reported. Evangelist Starke began a two weeks' campaign in Georgetown, Del, on Monday along the same lines of the campaign held in Easton.
