SEEK CHILD MISSING WITH DEMENTED MAN

All Sections Combed For Little Daughter Of Frank Ivens, of Kent County.

The Bulletin of Wednesday had the following interesting item of a former Kent countian:

The Lower Merion police and residents of Ardmore are searching for Louise Ivens, the ten-year-old daughter of Frank Ivens, farmer on the Haverford College Farms.

The child disappeared last night with Charles Hemphill, thirty-two, a farm hand. Hemphill is said by the police to have escaped from an insane asylum near Clayton, N. J., a few weeks ago.

Dr. William H. Ivens, a veterinarian, 5329 Haverford ave., Philadelphia, an uncle of the missing child is assisting in the search. He led an armed posse last night and early today when the outskirts of the Main Line towns were searched in vain for Hemphill and the child.

Hemphill has been employed at the College Farms for a week. When he was given employment nothing was known of his mental condition. He boarded at the Ivens home on the farm. A few days ago he began showing signs of being feeble-minded.

He seemed unusually fond of children and because of this fact he was not considered dangerous. He treated the three children of Mr. Ivens with utmost kindness and seemed greatly attached to Louise, the oldest child.

Last evening he obtained the consent of the child's father to take Louise to a motion picture establishment in Ardmore. No trace of them has been found since. It is not yet known whether they even went to the "movies."

When the child failed to return by 11 o'clock the parents became alarmed and notified the police. Captain James I. Donaghy, chief of the department, led a searching party and scoured the countryside.

The father of the girl then telephoned to his brother, Dr. Ivens, and asked that he notify the Philadelphia police. Every untenanted house and barn in the vicinity of Haverford and Ardmore was carefully searched.

The child's mother is distracted. She fears she has met with foul play. The child is an attractive girl, with black hair and dark eyes. She is of medium build.

Hemphill is a powerful man, six feet tall, and weighing 190 pounds.

A dispatch from Mr. Ivens says the child was found unharmed on the street. Hemphill had lost his mind.
