ADVENTURES OF POLLY AND JOCKO

You are about to hear of the adventures of Polly and Jocko Shagalbac. I will now begin with the first adventure, which is called "The Fire, or Polly and Jocko Shagalbac's Brave Act."

Once upon a time there was a man named Mr. Shagalbac. This man owned a lot of pets. He had a dog named Rover, a cat named Tibbett, a bear named Bruno, and a horse named Prancer and lots of others, including a monkey and a parrot. The monkey was named Jocko and the parrot was named Polly. Mr. Shagalbac was married and had four children.

One night Polly woke up. She smelled smoke. Knowing that her master's room door was shut, she flew over to Jocko. "The house is on fire, Jocko," said she to Jocko, after awakening him. "Let's go to the telephone." So thew went.

When they got to the telephone, Polly said to Jocko, "Jocko, please hold the receiver for me. This Jocko did, and it was not long before—

"Hello, Central."

"Who is this?" from Central.

"Polly."

"Polly—who?"

"Polly Parrot."

"Whose parrot?"

Mr. Shagalbac's parrot. Mr. Shagalbac's house is on fire."

"How are you holding the receiver?"

"Jocko is holding it for me."

"All right. I will phone up the firemen. Goodby."

"Good-by."

Dong, dong, dong, dong, dong, dong, dong!

Clang, clang!

"Great Scott! A fire!" said Mr. Shagalbac. "Wake up, wife! Wake up, children! Come up stairs, Polly, Jocko!" So Polly and Jocko came up, Polly on Jocko's shoulder. The wife and children came into the room also.

"Oh, father!" said one of the children, "the firemen and the engines are in fron of the house!"

"Great Scott! So they are!"

After a while the Shagalbacs got out. Then Mr. Shagalbac went next door to phone. Before long—

"Hello, Central!"

"Who is this?"

"Mr. Shagalbac. Who told you that my house was on fire?"

"Your parrot. She said, 'Jocko is holding the receiver for me."

Next day the friends of Mr. Shagalbac clubbed together and bought two medals, which they presented to Polly and Jocko. Nobody, not even "Central," forgot the night when Polly and Jocko saved the lives of the Shagalbac family.
