BEAR, NOT BARE

Ma says she's not a thing to wear.
I cannot see it, I declare.
There's one thing she looks pretty fair in
You must admit—and
that's her bear-skin.

The Boys Are All A[illegible]y

How shall we wreathe the holly?
How hang the mistletoe?
How shall we keep the Christmas feast
With the joy we used to know,
When on the happy Christmas Day
The boys are all away?

The holly pricked their fingers
And brought wee drops of red,
When caught beneath the mistletoe
The laughing lassies fled.
No romping games this year we'll play—
The boys are all away.

But we will never shame the lads
With hearts so bold and true,
We'll never mix our Christmas greens
With sombre boughs of yew;
With courage high we'll learn to say:
"The boys are all away."

We'll keep the heart and make the home
As bright as bright can be
And sing the carols old and sweet
Of Christ's nativity,
Like Mary smile, the while we pray
For all the boys away.

—Ethelbert D. Warfield.

A Common Human Failing.

It is undoubtedly more blessed to give than to receive; but it is a human failing to compare the value of Christmas gifts.

IN MEMORIAM

James Preston Jones was born at Chestertown, Maryland, October 16, 1891, and passed away at New York City November 14, 1918. His boyhood days were spent in Chestertown and in Philadelphia; afterwards he moved to Phenix, Arizona, where he completed his high school course. After two years of business experience he entered the University of Arizona where he graduated with the degre of Bachelor of Arts in 1916. Even before his graduation he had become associated with the Administrative Offices of the University and upon completing his course was elected by the Board of Regents to the position of Assistant to the President which he held until his entrance into government work. Intensely anxious to serve his country in the largest capacity after the opening of the war, he volunteered for any service possible for him to do. In March 1918 he was appointed clerk of the American Embassy at Berne, Switzerland, and took up his duties at once. Returning to America in November he contracted influenza on shipboard and passed away at St. Vincents Hospital after a brief illness.

His remains were taken to Chestertown and laid to rest beside those of his mother who had preceded him by some years. A brief funeral service was held at the cemetery, the address being delivered by the President of the University with which he had been so intimately associated.

Expressions of sympathy and floral tributes from a host of friends testify to the affection and esteem in which Mr. Jones was held.

He was a man of exemplary character, loyal in his friendships, sympathetic in his social contacts, thoroughly conscientious in all his dealings. With instincts and accomplishments of a scholar he never lost the human touch which does so much to make scholarship of service to mankind. Ambitious beyond the ordinary young man, he never sought to gain the ends of his ambition at the expense of others. His counsel and advise to hundreds of young men whom he touched in his university life has helped them into the realization of a higher manhood than they would have known otherwise. While simple in his tastes he keenly appreciated the best things of the world and sought to make them available to as many as possible.

While still young he had crowded into so many experiences that usually come only with advanced years that we do not think of his career as incomplete. He had "finished his course." His memory will always remain an inspiration to better things in the hearts of those who knew him best.

A FRIEND.

In sad but loving remembrance of MEDFORD YOUNGER, who departed this life one year ago Nov. 29, 1918.

I can not forget you husband dear,
Thou long may seem the year
And often in the lonely hour
I wipe away many a tear.

WIFE.

Home is sad, O God, how dreary,
Lonesome, lonesome every spot,
Listening for the voice of father,
Silent for we hear him not.

SON RAYMOND.

One mournful year have vanished,
Think we while the tear drop starts,
But the memory of our father
Still is fresh within our hearts.

SON IRA.

He shall never be forgotten,
Never shall his memory fade,
Sweetest thoughts shall ever linger
Around the grave where he is laid.

DAUGHTER RUTH.

Thy hands are clapsed upon thy breast,
I have kissed thy loving brow
And in my aching heart I know,
I have no father now.

THE MAKING OF A FAMOUS MEDICINE

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Is Prepared For Woman's Use.

A visit to the laboratory where this successful remedy is made impresses even the casual looker-on with the reliability, accuracy, skill and cleanliness which attends the making of this great medicine for woman's ills.

Over 350,000 pounds of various herbs are used anually and all have to be gathered at the season of the year when their natural juices and medicinal substances are at their best.

The most successful solvents are used to extract the medicinal properties from these herbs.

Every utensil and tank that comes in contact with the medicine is sterilized and as a final precaution in cleanliness the medicine is pasteurized and sealed in sterile bottles.

It is the wonderful combination of roots and herbs, together with the skill and care used in its preparation which has made this famous medicine so successful in the treatment of female ills.

The letters from women who have been restored to health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which we are continually publishing attest to its virtue.

"The Line Is Busy"

When the line is reported busy it doesn't necessarily follow that the person to whom you wish to speak is using the telephone.

If the station called is on an individual line, it may be that another person in the office or home is using the telephone, or using an extension on the same line but in another part of the building, or that someone at either telephone is trying to get a number, or is being called by a third person. Or, on a party line, another subscriber may be using a telephone on the same line.

And remember, please, that the operator says "Busy," or "They don't answer" only when it is necessary.
