RECENTLY RECEIVED FROM OVERSEAS

FRANK H. RUTH, GALENA, MD.

You old discarded "plug," wouldst that my heel
Could crush the hand that fashioned thus your steel
Yet my spleen would hanker for the foe
Whose lust of pow'r plunged millions into woe.
A derelict at last—your mission's done—
No more an asset of the ruthless Hun.
Yet, here we muse in viewing of your dome,—
"To whom were you assigned, where was his home?"
Didst Schleswig Holstein claim his natal bed?
Didst Munich wave her banners o'er his head?
But pshaw! Why meditate? 'Tis this we know,
You crowned the lousy head of one—our foe.
'Tis here we feel our passion would be lax,
Unless we yearned to raze you with an ax:—
To fling you down,—down there by Hades gate,
Wherein the Boche now sings his "song of hate."
Those rents through which avenging bullets ploughed,
Bespeak a tale; and tell of Teuton cowed.
From evidence you show, 'tis very clear
The shot that caught you struck you in the rear—
A poltroon's wound—a craven you would shield;
Not one who died a hero on the field.
Blush if you can and hide yourself in shame,
Together with your ilk who "played the game."
Souvenir indeed! three thousand miles away
From where your victor chants "The Marseillaise."
You'll cross no more the Rhine's historic flood,
For lo! your waterloo was Ypres mud;—
And as we sift it from you—ugly casque,
Our musing wakes again; and thus we ask—
Why should one man unloose within an hour
His "dogs of war"—a mighty, latent pow'r—
To scourge the earth; and find in their defeat,
Ambition is, at most, a glorious cheat?

CHRISTIANS TO ARMS, TO SAVE THE LORD'S DAY

Satan has many devices for breaking down the kingdom of God, but none more sneaking and effective than his assaults on the integrity of the Lord's Day, in his effort to reduce it to the level of other days.

The professing Christian who abandons his Lord's Day to pleasuring ceases to grow; he may get saved in the end, but he is pretty "feek and weeble" as a Christian, and as a soldier he is just no good at all, in fact, he is a sort of a deserter.
