TOOK FUNDS IN 1915

Queen Anne's Cashier Admits He Juggled Shortage Four Years—How He Did It Is A Puzzle—After First Losses, He Kept Taking More And More To Recoup—Nearly $70,000 Gone.

With the admission Tuesday by G. O. Calloway, who resigned Wednesday as cashier of the Stevensville Bank of Maryland, Kent Island, and who was arrested charged with embezzling $50,000 from that institution that he started taking funds from the bank as early of 1915, surprise was expressed there and throughout Queen Anne's county that the shortage had not been discovered sooner.

While State Bank Commissioner George W. Page has made no statement, it is said the shortage will run nearly to $70,000. The bank is capitalized at $10,000, and the size of the deficit makes it certain that every depositor of the bank will be seriously affected. Many had all their savings in the institution.

William E. Denny, president, of the board, says had the directors had any suspicion the affairs of the bank were not as they should be, immediate steps would have been taken to remedy things.

Calloway told a conference of the directors, examiners and State's Attorney Edwin H. Brown of how he started in 1915 to speculate in grain on the New York market. He suffered losses, he said, and in hope of recouping took more money. Again he lost, he said, and then kept taking more and more until the shortage had reached such staggering figures that he knew he could never hope to replace it, even by lucky speculation.

W. H. W. Love, station agent for the Maryland, Delaware and Virginia at Stevensville, who was also arrested and charged with conspiracy, Calloway says, was his accomplice in the speculation. He permitted Lowe to overdraw his account, he said, paying his checks with funds of other depositors.

In spite of the financial shock the affair has forced on Kent Island, not a few express sympathy for Callawoy and for his parents and family.

Calloway and Lowe will have a preliminary hearing Saturday, December 13. The Circuit Court does not meet until May. Both men are out on bail.

Rumors that others would be implicated were denied.
