CHESTERTOWN'S NEW STORE

NOLAND'S

The holidays have passed and we again thank the public for the very large share of business given us. While this was going on we were busy looking out for your wants. We have been lucky and able to land some good bargains to offer at a price that will make some one wonder how we did it. But cash is the great leaver. Come and see. This week it will be Ladies' Waists, Ladies', Children's and Men's Hosery. All our Winter Underwear will be added to this make room sale. Gloves for everybody. Floor Coverings are all priced to move quick. We are kept busy—Plumbing—but call us when needed.

Personal Paragraphs

Earl Godwin, of Rocky Point, N. C., has been visiting the Pomona M. E. parsonage.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Rayner, of Baltimore, were in Chestertown, last week on legal business in connection with the settlement of the estate of her mother, the late Mrs. Avis Vannort.

Mrs. Mollie Melvin, widow of Prof. Milton Melvin, former superintendent of county schools, is in a sanitarium at Baltimore, for special treatment.

Mrs. Walter Bennett has been visiting friends in Wilmington.

Wm. Sachs visited his sister in Ohio last week.

Miss Flora Wheatley and Miss Stevens attended the wedding of Miss Wheatley in Annapolis on Saturday evening.

Mrs. E. Dale Adkins, nee Miss Jesse Graham, was the hostess at a luncheon on Wednesday at her home in Salisbury, at which Mrs. Adams, of Sykesville, Md., was the guest of honor. Covers were laid for twelve.

Alvin E. Coleman spent Sunday with his wife's parents, Capt. Gladden, in Annapolis.

Wm. S. Collins attended a meeting of the stockholders and directors of the Chesapeake Oil and Gas Co. and the Eastern Shore Coal Co., in Baltimore, last week. Mr. Collins is favorable to the plan to consolidate both companies into one. The oil company holds valuable leases in Texas and fine producing coal mines in West Virginia.

James W. Crouch and wife spent several days in Philadelphia last week on business.

J. H. Clendaniel, Jr,. Overland-Willys Knight Auto Dealer, has secured the service of Edw. Furbush as saleman. Mr. Furbush has for the past year conducted a used automobile business in Kent and Queen Anne's counties. We consider Mr. Clendaniel lucky in being able to secure the services of such an experienced and reputable man.

Leeds Barroll, of Philadelphia, has been the guest this week of his brother, H. H. Barroll, Esq., in Chestertown.

MARYLAND MUSTINGS

CHESTERTOWN

I want to be there when the steamer blows,
When the spring comes back with the yellow rose;
Want to be there where the old homes stand
With such open heart and such beckoning hand.
And the streets of the past that tell so much
Of the old, far-off colonial touch
Of life in a land that was sweet to know
In its beautiful romance of Long Ago.
I want to be there when the robins sing
In the porch of May, in the door of spring;
When the yellowhammers come back to the wall,
When the moon comes up, and the far-off call
Of the steamer is sounding—so eerily sweet—
Down where the Chester and Corsica meet.
I want to be there on the college hill
With that ribbon of river unwinding still,
I want to be there in a wanderer's way
To walk by the wharves, and to dream and play,
To step in the cool old custom house
Where its ghosts of the past are as still as a mouse,
And the great days gone come out of the mist
And the visions rise, and you peer and list,
And you see old shadows of beauty go down
The stone-paved byways of Chestertown.
I want to be there once more, once more,
To feel and to know that spell of its lore,
That beauty and charm and spirit and gleam
Of the wonderful Maryland of our dream;
And I want so much to hear, just to hear,
The steamer come up when the mists are clear,
Whistling its call that the years repeat
Where the Corsica and the Chester meet.
—F. McK.
