WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

Chestertown High School combined a meeting of the Literary Society and celebration of Washington's Birthday Monday afternoon. This program was presented and reported by the official named for this work:

After the singing of a song, America, the Beautiful by the society, an address by the new president, Wilbur Strong, was followed by the reading of the minutes by Josephine Kratzer.

Under new business Mildred Price was appointed to take the place of one of the pupils, Mary Quinn who was absent. As this was an important position, that of upholding a part of the affirmative side of the debate, Miss Price is to be congratulated upon the way she handled the subject.

After the reading of the first half of the Echo and a patriotic selection written by E. A. Guest and given by Isabelle Atkinson, the debate was well handled by those who presented this part of the program.

Resolved, That the location of Chester bridge should be changed.

Affirmative, William Blakeney, Mildred Price; Negative, Margaret Tarbutton, Laurence Gardner; The judges, Miss Howard, Anna Perkins and Dudley Stafford decided in favor of the negative.

After the reading of the second part of the Echo and the report of the judges F. G. Usilton, of the Kent News, was introduced by the president and gave an excellent address upon the world conditions with especial emphasis upon the situation in Armenia.

Professeor Creasey's quintette of boys —Norman Crow, Gale Willis, Pryor Armstrong, Frank Estes and Noel Usilton pleased the audience by the singing selections.

After asking a number of Chestertown's most prominent citizens to assist in the celebration of the day by speaking upon the life and work of our first President, Prof. Creasy decided to give this part of the program to a member of the junior class, Willard Culp, whose work showed careful and painstaking preparation.

At the end of the program as prepared by the school, Dr. Clarke, County Superintendent, and Miss France, Supervisor of Elementary Schools, made a few pertinent remarks.

Y. W. C. A. Campaign.—The Y. W. C. A. educational campaign,which has been waged throughout the country for some months past, is drawing to a close; it is hoped by the leaders of the movement that enough interest has been aroused to induce people to give of their money to help push forward the excellent work of this organization. Kent county is asked to contribute $350.00, and it is hoped our people will be moved to give this and more. The campaign in Kent has been carried on through the various organizations, the committee hoping thus to get before every one the work and needs of the Y. W. C. A. and to give to every one the opportunity to contribute. Any gift, small or large, will be appreciated and may be made through some organization to which you belong, through your church, or it may be sent direct to the treasurer. The campaign in Kent closes March 8th. Please send all contributions by that time to Mrs. Edw. Corwin, Chestertown, Md.
