The acceptance speeches of Cox and Roosevelt this week have the ring of true Democracy and places the real issue before the people, viz., The League of Nations. Not a league of nations that has no existence except in the minds of partisan politicians—not a mythical or intangible association or society of nations which is without form and void. They are for the League of Nations that is already established—for the League of which 29 governments have already given their adherence.

They do not insist that the covenant must be accepted without interpretations, but are in full accord with the platform of their party in that respect. They are willing to accept any reasonable interpretations that clarify the obligations of the United States under the League, but stand firmly against anything "that disturbs the vital principle" of the League. Every lover of justice and right can stand on this platform.
