Department of Commerce In Washington College

At the quarterly meeting of the Board of Visitors and Governors of Washington College held Wednesday, Jan. 12, the president of the college was authorized to employ a teacher of commercial branches, and make other definite arrangements for the opening of a department of commerce at the college next September.

It is the intention of the college authorities to establish a school that will offer all the work now given in the ordinary business college and carry it very much further. Probably the elementary courses such as stenography, typewriting, and book-keeping will not receive college credit, though provision will be made whereby the students can pursue these subjects. The more advanced work, however, such as accounting, salesmanship, advertising, business organization and management, and banking will count toward a regular college degree.

Two years of work will be provided. Students who do not wish to remain four years in college and receive a bachelor's degree may specialize in the department of business science. Others may take this along with the required cultural courses and make up their full college course.

There are at present hundreds of high school graduates who have taken the commercial course in the lower schools and find themselves unable to meet the requirements for college entrance. As a rule these students do not find the courses they wish even if they do get into college. These students will all be eligible to enter the new department of business science without loss of credit.

It is the hope of the college authorities to work up a course in business science based directly on the business needs and conditions of the counties of Maryland. Because of the difficulties in securing suitable text-books, this feature may have to be worked out slowly. But as far as possible illustrations and specific problems will be drawn from the business life of the counties so that the graduates will have a more intimate knowledge of the business conditions into which they will probably enter than can be obtained in any of the prominent business schools of the northern universities. Washington College will probably be the only school in the world that attempts to perform this specific service to its local business world.

The financing of the new department constituted the great problem before the Board. But it is confidently hoped that the present endowment campaign will return sufficient sums to carry on the work. Present indications strongly support this letter.

Another much needed service that the Board hopes to be able to perform for the Eastern Shore is the higher education of women. At present women's education is sadily neglected in this State. Washington College already admits women as students, and has a number of women graduates of whom it is justly proud. But additional funds are needed to enlarge this work. The Board did not think it wise to count too largely on the present endowment campaign, but it is hoped that by the spring meeting the campaign will have proceeded far enough for it to authorize the enlargement of women's facilities at the college at that time.

Among other things done by the Board at this meeting was the nomination of five new members. The names of the gentlemen nominated were withheld for the present. They will be announced as soon as the election is formally completed.

OLD MEN IN HISTORY

Speaking of old men, do you know that Pope Leo XIII and John Adams were giving out great ideas at 90? Henry Gassaway Davis, who died a few weeks ago at 93, was looking after his great interests in mines and railroads at 92. George Bancroft, the historian was writing deathless history at 80. Tennyson wrote his greatest poem, "Crossing the Bar," at 83. Michelangelo painted the greatest single picture ever painted by mortal man at 80 and was master of the sky and sunshine at 83. Goethe wrote "Faust," the masterpiece of all German literature at 80. Thomas Jefferson, Telleyrand, Herbert Spencer and Voltaire were giving out great ideas at 80. Gladstone made the greatest campaign of his entire career at 80 and was master of Great Britain at 83. John Wesley was at the height of his eloquence and power at 88. Humbolt, the great scientist and explorer, submitted the last section of his immortal "Cosmos" at 90. Victor Hugo was at his best from 75 to 80.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE

While Rev. Dr. J. F. Heisse in a sermon Sunday night at Union Square Methodist Episcopal Church was threatening women with the ultimate loss of man's respect unless they changed the present style of dress, Rev. Dr. Russell H. Conwell, from the pulpit of the Baptist Temple Church, in Philadelphia, was taking just the opposite view.

While Dr. Heisse was telling his congregation that "modern young women are forfeiting the respect of gentlemen by wearing immodest clothes and by allowing themselves to be victims of prevailing styles." Dr. Conwell was telling his congregation that "a woman may be ever so modest and wear her dresses ever so short." While Dr. Heisse was holding forth on the theme that the young women of today are injuring both their health and morals by their style of clothing, Dr. Conwell was assuring his congregation that the present style of woman's dress had worked a decided change for the betterment of her health. While Dr. Heisse was terming the present style of clothing ungraceful, sensuous voluptuous, immodest and indecent Dr. Conwell was assuring his hearers that it was graceful, unobtrusive, modest and sensible.
