KENT NEWS

CHESTER TOWN, Md.

SATURDAY MORNING, SEPT. 15, 1855.

OF THE AMERICAN PARTY!!

A MASS MEETING of the American Party will be held at GEORGETOWN, Kent Co., Md., on SATURDAY, September 22nd, inst., at 10 o'clock, A. M. The following distinguished gentleman will be present and address the meeting:

COL. DANIEL H. McPHAIL, the candidate for Lottery Commissioner.
WM. H. TRAVERSE,
HON. LEWIS C. LEVIN,
HENRY WINTER DAVIS,
COL. JAMES B. RICAUD,
AND OTHERS.

A DINNER will be provided and a cordial invitation is extended to all parties.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Sept. 15, 1855.

BALLOON ASCENSION.—We notice by a poster at the hotel of Mr. McDaniel, that Mons. Bonsoit will make an ascension from this town on Monday, when all who desire may witness it free of charge.

CIRCUS.—Joe Pentland's Circus will exhibit in this place on Monday next. It is said to be a very superior establishment, but whether it is or not, we cannot say. The best way to ascertain is to go and see.

THE MARYLANE INSTITUTE EXHIBITION. The Eight Annual Exhibition of the Maryland Institute will commence on the 2d day of October, and close on or before Monday, 5th November. All articles for exhibition only will be received free of charge until Saturday night, 29th Sept. All articles for competition or premium, must be deposited on or before Thursday night 27th of Sept.

ANTI-KNOW NOTHING MEETING.—It will be seen by an advertisement in another column, that the Anti-Know Nothings of this county, contemplate nominating their ticket for county officers on Tuesday next. We advise them to "trot out their fastest nags," and remember the game that is to be played in November is "heads we win, tails you lose!"

"THE AMERICAN DEMOCRAT" is the title of a new daily paper which made its appearance in Baltimore city on Monday last. As its name indicates, it is devoted to the advocacy of American principles, and is edited with ability, and is in every respect, a neat and handsome journal.—We wish it great success, both pecuniarily and politically; and doubt not that it will prove a valuable auxiliary to the American party. Terms: $4 per annum. Address Abram Requa, 158 Balt. St.

NOMINATIONS.—The Democrats of Q. A. Co., we learn, have made the following nominations: For the Legislature, R. B. Carmichael, Dr. W. Finley; for Sheriff, Edward Sudler; for State's Attorney, John M. Robinson; for Judges of the Orphans' Court, Perry Wilmer, John B. Thomas, and Thos. Wright, 3d.; for County Commissioners, Wm. Tanner, John R. Emory and Wm. Hand.

The Americans of Baltimore City, have nominated Z. Collius Lee, for Judge of the Superior Court, and Milton Whitney, for State's Attorney. The balance of the ticket have not yet been nominated.

STRANGE.—The anti-American press and "orators" have long been bitter in their denunciations of the American party on account of its secresy; yet we find these very men as silent as the grave in regard to Jesuitism, and Sag-Nichtism. Strange, isn't it? that American citizens, who having been reared and nurtured by free institutions, know how to appreciate the value of those institutions, are so dangerous to their country, whilst there is nothing to be dreaded from secret associations of foreigners in our midst, who have inherited the national prejudices and monarchial ideas of the nations from whence they come? "Oh, consistency, thou art a jewel!" How unfortunate to be born on American soil.

FIGHTING UNDER FALSE COLORS.—The advocates of the Pierce-ocracy, we understand, have handbills posted in the lower district of this county, calling on the friends of civil and religious liberty to assemble at Stone's Springs to-day, for the purpose of appointing delegates to form a ticket in opposition to the Know Nothings. Shades of reason! Friends of civil and religious liberty in coalition with the Roman hierarchy!—the deadly foe to civil and religious liberty, and who in past ages, where ever they possessed the numerical strength, have brought to the guillotine and block, those who dared refuse to subscribe to the dogmas of the Roman Catholic church, and worship God in the manner which their consciences taught them to be right;—that church which even in this land of religious freedom, in open daylight, has caused a bonfire to be publicly made of the BIBLE, the palladium of all civil and religious liberty! Friends (?) of civil and religious liberty, indeed!—their patriotic labors are superfluous; the preservation of civil and religious liberty has passed into more faithful hands.

"NO DANGER."—There is no danger, say the opponents of the American party, that the Roman Catholics will ever obtained the ascendency in America; the people will not permit them. True, there is no danger whilst the people keep a check upon the insidious machinations of that sect, in their efforts to place themselves in power; but suppose THE PEOPLE were like the opponents of Americanism, and instead of joining themselves together in one united effort to protect the liberties of their country, were to lend their aid to enable the Roman Catholics to obtain the power which they so much desire, then would the worst fears of the patriotic men of our country be realized, and America would fall from her Alpine heights of religious toleration and civil liberty, so low into Papal intolerance and despotism, that, like the once proud republic of Rome, there would be "none so poor as to do her reverence."

The French Huguenots also thought, previous to the memorable massacre of St. Bartholomew, that no danger was to be apprehended from the Catholics, but what a warning have we from the events of the 24th of August, 1572—(the heart-sickening deeds of which day but added another tale of blood to the long catalogue of crime which has ever marked the history of the Romish Church)—that the perpetuation of civil and religious liberty should never be entrusted to the subjects of the Pope. And such a state of affairs, we fear, as is to be found in Italy, Spain and other countries where Papal intolerance has held sway, will be witnessed in republican America, when a majority of the people shall think, with some of the opponents of the Amercan party, that "the soul of one Catholic is worth more than the souls of all the Know-Nothings from Maine to California."

Americans, it behooves you to guard well the liberties which have been transmitted to you by your ancestors, and to permit no alien hand to be ruthlessly stretched forth for the destruction of those liberties, but to proclaim with a voice that shall reverberate "to the uttermost parts of the earth," that none but "Americans shall ever rule America."

BOMBARDMENT OF GREYTOWN.—The following letter from Mr. White, was sent by Col Kinny to the United States, and has been going the rounds of the papers for several days past:

Office New York and California Steamship Line, via Nicaragua,
No. 5 Bowling Green, June 16, '54.

DEAR SIR:—Capt. Hollins leaves here next Monday. You will see from his instructions that much discretion is given to you, and it is to be hoped that it will not be so exercised as to show any mercy to the town or people.

If the scoundrals are soundly punished, we can take possession and build it up as a business place, put in our own officers, transfer the jurisdiction, and you know the rest.

It is of the last importance that the people of the town should be taught to fear us. Punishment will teach them, after which you must agree with them as to the organization of a new government and the officers of it. Everything now depends on you and Hollins. This latter is all right. He fully understands the outrage, and will not hesitate in enforcing reparation.

I hope to hear from you that all is right. Yours, &c.,

J. L. WHITE.

J. W. FABENS, Esq.

If this letter be genuine, and we have seen its authenticity disputed nowhere, it throws a flood of light upon the whole transaction. The scoundrels were first to be "soundly punished," but that was but a small part of the programme. The next step was to take possession, and "build it (Greytown) up, as a business place, put in our own officers, transfer the jurisdiction" and after all this is done, Mr. Fabens "knew the rest." In plain terms the bombardment of Greytown was a commercial transaction, undertaken for the benefit of the Transit Company. By that Company it seems to have been organized and the government of the United States acted the Cats Paw in the whole transaction. We always suspected this, but we were not prepared to see it it so fully substantiated. What a great Government ours is, to be sure, and what a great President we have at the head of it.—American Democrat.

Memoir of Mrs. E. C. Waters.

DEAR BRO. REESE:—At your obliging request, communicated through my son, I here furnish for the Methodist Protestant the following brief notice of the late Mrs. E. C. Waters, my most excellent christian consort. As already announced she died in this city, on Sabbath, the 26th inst., at 1¼ o'clock, P. M.

In her usual health, except as affected slightly by what I considered a transient cold, brought on by a recent extreme change of weather, she left home on the Monday preceding, upon a travel to visit some of our nearest relatives and friends; but, alas! how instantly and unexpectedly was this frustrated by a wise, though most inscrutable interposition of the providence of God. To his will, knowing that it must be benevolent and right, I desire to bow in all the meekness and silence of profound resignation, notwithstanding my acute sense of the bereavement, as being oppressive and overwhelming beyond expression. "Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither. The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." My wife's illness, as such, was very short. She had no pain whatever, except severe head-ache for the first day; and, in the judgement of her physicians, she merely sunk away, and breathed out the breath of life, as she died without a struggle, because her delicate nature was exhausted, and her remaining powers too feeble to react under any treatment, however judicious and faithful.

Of her life and character I need say but little, unless I were to attempt some extended memoir, and that in another form, as strangers might feel no particular interest in it, and her acquaintance and friends, who know her well, do not require it for their information.

In intellect and judgment, in prudence and forecast, and all the attributes that impart distinguished worth to female character, especially in the domestic and social affinities and relations of life, and where, too, woman is found in her peculiar and beautiful provision, no one, acquainted with the facts, will charge me with any weakness when I say, Mrs. Waters had but few superiors. Under this dispensation of providence, our only child, a daughter, now well nigh grown, is cast on my exclusive protection and training, and certainly no one so young could have sustained a greater loss at such a period of life.

Her mother seemed everything to her, saw with interest and rare intuition every thing her child needed, ought to have, ouget to be—and with a maternal devotion that knew no weariness, was resolved with God's assisting grace, that nothing should be omitted that was necessary to her proper and complete education for the responsible cares and duties of life. These views, with the assistance of divine grace, and my life spared so long, I am resolved to have fully carried out.

As a christian, Mrs. Waters was intelligent and clear in her views of points of doctrine, as held and maintained in our standard of faith, and no less so on all questions of practical duty and godliness. In her own religious profession or experience, she was characteristically diffident and modest, owing chiefly, I apprehend, to the high standard she had established, from Scripture and other proper sources, of the essential and appropriate attributes and attainments of the domplete christian character. Yet no one delighted more in all the genuine spiritualities of religion, in revivals of the work of God, and in the directness and evangelic power and unction of pulpit ministrations. Indeed, sermons and services of any other kind seemed, for the most part, unsatisfactory to her; and she often spoke of such distinctions in my own discourses, saying, that your sermon to-day was too metaphysical too logic in form or method, and not so profitable, because not so intelligible.—And, at another time, "that sermon was plain, full of experience, and calculated to do good, because adapted to exery understanding, and coming home to every one's heart and feelings."

This was, I believe, and I thank God for it, particularly the case with the last sermon of mine that she was permitted to hear, on the Sabbath morning before she took her final leave of her earthly home. I may add, that such was equally the case with my two discourses on the immediately preceding Sabbaths, in the same pulpit, and which she also heard.—It may be, the hand of God was in it, in leading my mind to the selection of such subjects for the especial edification and comfort of her mind, without giving us to know the final cause of it. Be that as it may, and I conceive it no weakness of superstition to suppose such a thing probable, I rejoice in God that we were privileged to pass our last three Sabbaths in such circumstances of spiritual communion and trust that it was but a foretaste of that perfect bliss she now has in full possession and which by the grace of God, I am purposed to seek till I die, that then I may enjoy it in all its rich fulness with her in the upper sanctuary of heaven, for ever and ever.

Great energy and decision were predominant elements in the mental constitution and character of Mrs. Waters. It was the mental energy that broke down her feeble physical frame. The machine in its structure and organization, was too delicate and too finely wrought to endure longer the impulses of a moral power and purpose that really seemed quite sufficient for the muscular ability of two robust and active men. She had an eye that appeared to discern at a glance what ought of be done, and then with an unyielding grasp she would take hold of the object to be carried out, indifferent to labor or weariness, until her purpese was fully accomplished. This principle or spirit was particularly exemplified, where, if ever, it ought to have been, in any important or commanding claim or act of duty, as the calls and appeals of the church, or of the christian ministry, the necessities and sufferings of the poor, the demands of personal or social sympathy, and the chamber of disease or death.

Mrs. Waters was also a woman of stern and immutable conscientiousness, so that no temptation, great or small, could have induced her to deviate from what she regarded a matter of moral duty and obligation. So powerful and absolute was this principle of her character, that I do not considet it too strong to say, that if I have ever known one individual of sufficient moral courage to face and encounter death rather than violate or compromise a clear conviction of the will or command of God, she possessed that virtue. I doubt whether she would have quailed at the fagot or block, had any such eventful trial occurred to test her faith and firmness.

I have here to add, that I do not know a more habitual and careful reader of the Bible than she was. This was her daily task, and it was seldom that any company or any business was allowed to interrupt it. She read the scriptures in regular and consecutive order; always took her own Bible with her on any journey, as she had done on this her last; and I now look with affecting interest at the bookmark, which indicates the last chapter she thus read in the Chronicles of the Old Testament.

In her church affinities, with an entire freedom from religious intolarance and bigotry, she was, from intelligent and studied preference, most decidedly attacked to her own communion. She embraced religion when young; then joined the M. E. Church, to which her family belonged; and at the earliest organization of the Associated Methodist Churches in Maryland, she, with many others, some of them young like herself, united with the new fellowship, at Centreville, where she then resided, and was a member of the first class, of which Judge Hopper was leader at that place. All this she did from principle, for I remember well how clear and decided, young as she was, she seemed to be in her views and determinations. At her death she was accordingly, one of the oldest members of the M. P. Church, from its earliest organization, though only in the 51st year of her age. I will add that, like myself, she was in sentiment and choice, strictly a Methodist; in devotion, means of grace, ecclesiastical peculiarities, as they have been from the beginning, social institutions and usages; preferring the old system, as she found it, with modifications of its polity and government, to any other, for the great purposes of her own religious benefit and comfort, as also of her family and friends, and as the fittest and most available human agency, now on trial, or probably ever tested before, for the conversion of sinners, the sanctification and support of believers, and the saving and effectual spread of scriptual holiness, of gospel influences, over this land, and througout the world. To this effect this sensible and most excellent woman, had expressed herself often and with great emphasis, in my hearing, but a few days before her death.

But, as a valued friend, and our family physician, Dr. Wroth, of Chestertown, has just written me: "The work appointed for my beioved campanion was finished, and she has entered into her rest." "Good and faithful servant," she has gone to her great reward. "Her child will rise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he will praise her." May that child be spared and trained to take her place in the church of God, and emulate her many virtues. May that husband have grace sufficient for the responsible duties that yet await him, until his appointed time shall also come.

The funeral services took place at 12 o'clock, on Monday morning, the 27th, and were conducted with appropriate solemnity by three of our ministerial brethren, who kindly attended, at my request, on the occasion. Brother Ball offered up the fervent prayer that God might sanctify the great and afflictive bereavement; Brother Valiant read a portion of scripture, and improved the solemn event with a profitable address; and Brother Shreeve, after the coffin was lowered to its final resting place, closed by reading our beautiful litany for the burial of the dead.—The redeemed spirit had already gone home to the God who gave it. The precious body now sleeps in calm repose, in Greenmount Cemetery, and there will rest until that bright and glorious morn, when Christ shall re-animate the dust of his saints, "that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able to subdue all things unto himself." Most affectionately, yours, F. WATERS.
