KENT NEWS.

CHESTER TOWN, Md.

SATURDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 22, 1855.

SENTENCED,—The negro Saul, convicted of the murder of Wm. H. Porter, in Queen Ann's county, was sentenced, on Saturday last, to be hung. The Governor has not yet fixed a day for his execution.

STATE COUNCIL.—The State Council of the American party will meet in Baltimore, on the 16th of January next, for the purpose of electing eight delegates to the National Convention.

NO SPEAKER YET.—There seems but little probability of a speedy organization of the House of Representatives—nearly three weeks have been consumed and yet no speaker elected. The following is the result of the last ballot on Wednesday, being the last: Banks, 102; Richardson 75; Fuller, 37, scattering 6.

☞ Jas. H. Rich, Esq., the Sheriff elect, gave the necessary bond, on Tuesday last and entered upon the duties of his office. The following gentlemen were his bonds-men: James Gale, Joseph W. Webb, William Lamb, Saml. E. Baker, Jno. H. Gemmill, Jas. Beck, of Geo., Isaac Parsons, Wm. H. Parks, Joshua Clark and Benj. H. Startt.

PUBLIC MEETING.—The meeting held at the Court House on Tuesday last, adjourned to meet at the same place on Wednesday the 26th inst., at eleven o'clock P. M. The last meeting was quite a good one, and manifested much spirit.—As the subject is one of deep interest, and affects so many persons, it is desirable, that the next meeting should be attended by all persons who were then present, as well as by all who were absent on that occasion. Let no one interested be absent on the 26th.

Address of Hon. W. W. Valk.

The subjoined address, from the highly distinguished Representative of the First District of the State of New York, will ring throughout the land like the blast of a trumpet, startling those who know not what their representatives are doing, and causing the knees of the latter to smite together as did those of Balshazzar when he read the message of wrath written upon the wall. It is one of the clearest, the most luminous, and comprehensive statements we have ever read upon the subject, with regard to which there has been so much pains taken to mystify the public. It is creditable, not less to the heart than to the head of its author. It evinces a high tone of sentiment with regard to the duties of a Representative, and a manful determination never to resign the banner which his constituents have placed in his hands. The conduct of Mr. Valk, and of the noble spirits who stand by him, is worthy of immortal honor, and proves to the world that however degenerate an example others may have set, the fire of Revolutionary freedom still burns with intense brilliancy in the breast of a remnant.

If there ever was in the political history of the country a position of surpassing grandeur, it is that now occupied by Mr. Valk and his companions. Encompassed by foes, they stand upon American soil, the banner of America waving over them, firm and resolute to the last—deterred by no danger, influenced by no promises, moved by no threats, determined to save their country or perish in the attempt.—But they will not perish, but they will save the country. This exposition will show where the traitors lie. It will be scattered all over the country, on the wings of its thousand presses. And it will come back, like the bee, laden with the fruits of its errand—with the indignant remonstrances of an aroused people, commanding their disobedient servants to do their duty to their country and the Union.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, Dec. 17, 1855.

To the American People:—It is not for a moment to be doubted, that from the unusual delay in the organization of the House by electing a Speaker, the people have become in a reasonable degree impatient, and may not truly understand the causes which have been instrumental in perpetuating this unpleasant state of affairs at the Capitol. Briefly then to disclose these causes, as far as the writer understands them, and upon his own responsibility as a member of the House, does he deem it proper and right to refer to them now.

It has by this time become thoroughly known to the country that previous to the meeting of the House, on the 3d of the present month, the Democratic or Administration party held a caucus, nominated Mr. Richardson for speaker and passed a resolution embodying their sentiments upon some of the present issues before the country, and most unnecessarily, as well as offensively, charging the American party with "violently assailing civil and religious liberty." The unanimity exhibited in adopting the resolution was only broken by the withdrawal of the Hon. Wm. Smith of Virginia, who retired from the caucus immediately after its reading. Here, then, we have the Democratic members of the House of Representatives, (forty-eight of them,) assuming to be exclusively patriotic and national, denouncing the American members of the same body, and resolving it to be their highest duty to maintain and defend the principles of the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and the constitutional rights of every section. They declare themselves the opponents of the Americans, the Republicans and the Fusionists, and there they take their stand before the people.

The Americans, those elected as such, and sent here to represent the true sentiments of the American organization, found on comparing notes, and ascertaining each other's views, that instead of harmonizing and standing on the same basis, they were a duality, the men of a section, and the men of the country. With the former, the latter could not act, for there was but a limited identity of principle, nor could the sectional men be regarded as the exponents of the broad and comprehensive views of the national men. It was evident, then, that in the House there would be three parties contending for the organization, or rather two in the attitude of contestants, while the third stood in the gap, and stand there still, while the black flag of Republicanism waving on one side of them, and the Democratic banner, stained with an insult, flung to the breeze on the other. It is due to themselves, and due to the country, that they should maintain their position, and refuse their aid to place in the Speaker's chair either Richardson or Banks. They will not assist in organizing the House upon a sectional issue, nor are they disposed to perpetuate the blessings heaped upon a noble and generous people, by the policy or measures of the present Administration.

At the commencement of the session, the National Americans decided to cast their votes for the Hon. Humphrey Marshall, because he was with them in sentiment and feeling, and deprecated sectionalism as wholly out of place in the popular representative body. He stood upon the American platform, and believed that we were all citizens of a common country, under the broad ægis of a Constitution whose every obligation it is our highest and most patriotic duty to fulfil. Mr. Marshall's name being subsequently withdrawn as a candidate, the votes of our small but resolute band became somewhat scattered, but finally concentrated upon the Hon. Henry M. Fuller, of Pennsylvania, a noble son of the Keystone State, and a man who dignifies the appellation of an American citizen. He knows no North, no South, no East, no West, but, giving thanks to God that his lot has been cast in this land of promise and hope, he bears aloft the flag of his country, and, pointing to its broad and ample folds, he bids us witness the insignia of freedom's last refuge, and our passport through the realms of civilization.

Forty-odd Conservative National Americans hold the balance of power in the House, and are struggling with fidelity to arrest the consummation of a sectional or Administration success. An intelligent people cannot fail to perceive the dignity and propriety of their position. The black flag shall never wave over the Speaker's chair, if their efforts and constancy can avert so dire a calamity. If the people desire the success of either the democratic or Free-soil Republican aspirants now before the House for the honors and emoluments of the Speakership, the accomplishment of their wishes can be in some way I presume brought about. The signs of the time are ominous of prospective calamities to the Union—who shall avert them if the National Americans do not?

WM. W. VALK, of New York.

For the Kent News.

MR. EDITOR:—Having been informed through various and reliable sources, that it is believed, to a certain extent, and perhaps generally, that I have been accessory to the escape of some of the slaves who left this county, during the last few months, I wish, through the columns of your paper, to make a few statements relative to the subject. To the charge, I plead not guilty! The only reasons given for such belief and suspicions, as far as I have learned, are that I am a Northern man, and an abolitionist; and that I went to Philadelphia about the time some of the slaves ran away, and called on Jas. L. Bowers, on my return.

The atrocious crime of having been born in a Northern State, and receiving views and sentiments, there universally entertained, I shall neither attempt to paliate nor deny; neither shall I attempt to illustrate why, or how it happened, that I was born in a Northern State;—or that I was born at all. But why I left my residence on the 20th of September last, went to Delaware City and Philadelphia, and returned on the 22nd of the same month, and called at the residence of Mr. Bowers, as I returned, (to which last fact, two respectable gentlemen of this county can attest), are matters which some one, without consulting me in the least, has unhesitatingly decided. The object of my visit to those places and the call I made on my return, I will give, and I challenge all Kent county, and the rest of mankind, to produce a shadow of proof that I had any other object or motive in view. My principal errand at D. City was: to procure a nurse for my family; which I did, and the nurse has been living in my family nearly all the time since. From Delaware city I went to Philadelphia for the purpose of purchasing clothing for myself, at which place I have procured nearly every garment that I have worn during the last thirteen years.

The object of my call at the residence of Mr. Bowers was to see him, but was told by a lady at the door, his wife I presume, that he was in Baltimore—my business with him was that of collecting money which had been due me from him for nearly a year. I had called on him before for the same purpose, but have since, which may avoid further suspicion, placed my claim in the hands of Esquire Graves.

My views upon the subject of slavery, are something with which the public, just now, have no business. I will merely add that they are not materially at variance with those entertained by slave-holders generally of this county.

The esteem in which I hold the individual who originated the report which I here deny, is also private property. Suffice it to say that I consider that individual who meets me upon the highway at midnight and robs me of my valuables, if any I chance to bear, a perfect gentleman compared to him who has thus vilely assailed my character, and represented me as a man worthy a coat of tar and feathers.

J. W. COREY.

Dec. 19, 1855.

P. S. Mr. B. will please excuse me for mentioning his name in connection with this article.

☞ A correspondent of the Petersburg Express gives an account of the execution of a negro named Jim Jones, at Liberty, Va., for the crime of murder. It is stated that as many as 5000 persons were present. The culprit declared, before he was executed, that whiskey and bad company had brought him to where he then stood; and he hoped everybody who heard him would take warning from his sad fate, profit by his melancholy end, and meet him in heaven.

MARRIAGES.

CONGRESS.—The members of the unorganized House continue to talk and occasionally vote, but are as far apparently from an election of Speaker as ever.—There is lttle or no change in the voting, and Mr. Banks, free soil, does not appear to have gained anything much by desertions from Mr. Fuller on the account of the latter's declarations against slavery agitation or attempts to restore the Missouri compromise. It is evident there will be no organization this week, and the Senate has therefore adjourned over until Monday.

THE COMPTROLLER AND LOTTERY COMMISSIONER.—William H. Purnell, Esq., Comptroller elect of the Treasury of Maryland, whose term commences on the 10th of January, took the oath of office on Saturday last, and gave bond, which was duly approved by the Governor. Major McPhail, Lottery Commissioner elect, took the oath of office several days ago. He has also given bond, which has been approved by the Governor. Hss term of office does not commence until March next.

False Report—Health of Senator Douglass.

Washington, Dec. 20.—The report that the original copy of the Declaration of Independence had been stolen from the Patent Office and a counterfeit substituted is untrue. The document has been there 14 years undisturbed.

Judge Douglas has written to his friends here that though suffering severely by an inflamed throat, he expects to be in Washington early in January.

SUDDEN DEATH.—The Norfolk News announces the sudden death of Mr. John J. Frisby, a young gentleman who removed to that city from Baltimore about twelve months ago. While passing thro' the market on Wednesday morning about sunrise, he was stricken down with an apoplectic fit, and soon breathed his last.
