Kent News

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1924

J. W. P. Insley, a Baltimore insurance man, has made application for the position now held by H. W. Vickers, Esq., of Kent. It is quite evident that the opposition to Mr. Vickers comes from this very reason, viz., some other man wants the job. Mr. Vickers has done more for fish, game and oysters than any other man who occupied the position filled by him.

As the result of an extensive survey of local fire-fighting equipment and machinery at the municipal electric and water plant by representatives of the Underwriters' Association, announcement was made last week that a reduction of five cents in the basic fire insurance rate of Centreville would become effective immediately. Roughly, it is estimated that this reduction will represent a saving of about $500 annually, to Centreville property owners and business men in the mercantile area.

The Kent News editors wrote to the Underwriters' Association in December and they stated that a man would be in this territory soon and would look into the matter. We would suggest that the Business Men's Association take the question up and push the reduced rate to a conclusion.

H. W. VICKERS ANSWERS "RETIRED SPORTS"

Declaring his opposition to the bill to abolish purse netting in Maryland was in keeping with his duties as a Conservation Commissioner, Harrison W. Vickers, who is "under fire" from the Anglers' Club defended his course Tuesday.

Mr. Vickers said it was as much his duty as a Conservation Commissioner to defend the interest of people who are making a living out of the fish industry as it is to defend "retired sports," who want the whole bay as their playground. He added:

"There are more rock this year than there ever has been in the bay, and with this increased supply I cannot see any way in which purse netting will annihilate rock fishing. A Conservation Commissioner's duty, as I see it, is to look after all phases of the sea food industry and be fair to all. It is my duty, as I conceive it, to protect the interest of the commercial fisherman as much as the sportsmen. It is my duty to look after the interest of the fish supply as a food problem as much as it is to look after the fish supply for the anglers and the sportsmen.

"I told the Anglers' Club officials purse netting ought to be reduced.

"The limit of the catches ought to be regulated, and the territory in which such fishing can be done ought to be cut down, but I do not believe that purse netters who make a living out of their work and who supply Baltimore with a third of itsfish supply during months when pound net fishing is not allowed should be driven out because a lot of retired sports want the whole bay to use as their playground."

MAKE CHESTERTOWN A "SPOTLESS TOWN"

A number of towns and cities are taking special pride in keeping the streets and back yards immaculately clean, and the "Spotless Town" fever is raging. Chestertown officials are anxious that the same spirit might prevail here. Many advantages are to be had by making Chestertown the cleanest town on the Shore if not in the State, and most organizations are discussing the question at great length.

The concensus of opinion is that much lies with the individual. Containers for the reception of paper placed at various points in the town have been tried and help wonderfully.

Cleanliness attracts business. A man or woman will not hesitate to enter a store if it presents a clean front. But very often people have been known to refrain from entering a place where untidiness and uncleanliness was everywhere evident. The same may be said of a town. Keep the place clean and visitors will come more readily.
