Try 2 Bags of

Larro The Ready Ration for Dairy Cows

Every dairyman in this county shold investigate Larro. We want you to see how it will either increase your milk yield or else produce the same milk with fewer cows, less feed and less work. It keeps cows in "tip top" condition. Ends off-feed conditions. Does all this because its famous blend of selected ingredients is succulent, palatable, easily digested and highly nourishing. Contains positively no filler or off-grade ingredients. Your neighbors know these things are true. If Larro fails to produce more milk—the 2-bag trial costs you nothing! Why take chances with uncertain home mixtures? Why waste time? We invite you to try Larro at once.

"Why Dad Should Join The Farm Bureau"

Winning Essay Of Farm Bureau Contest

By Margaret Sterling, Galena.

My Dad is always talking about the hard times the farmers of today are facing. He says the farmer is not being treated fairly; that when he works day in and season out, and more hours a day than the average working man for his services, plus a fair return from the money he has invested in his farm, his stock, and his equipment—there is something radically wrong somewhere. He says that it is true that many of the farmers toil all the year, and at the end have received not a penny of profit for their labor and investment.

My Dad says that the cause of these conditions does not rest altogether with the markets and the times, but that a good deal of the cause rests with the farmers themselves. Their over production, the crowding of the markets, the manner of marketing their produce, and their failure to co-operate with each other can account for a good bit of the hard times among the farmers, and that is why he should join the Farm Bureau.

He says that this is a day of co-operation and organization among the producers of similar products, that big enterprises everywhere are joining ranks for the protection of their interests, and at the same time so controlling the market as to receive the largest legitimate profit possible. The farmers who are engaged in the biggest business of the world, the business of feeding and clothing the world, should likewise organize, and for the same reason that these other interests organize.

There are a few organizations among the farmers, such as the "Milk Producers Association" and the various fruit and produce exchanges. These however are inadequate because they are local, and do not pretend to protect all the interests of the farmers, but only the crop that is directly related to them.

The Farm Bureau completely meets the need of organization among the farmers, because it is nation wide, there being state organizations in 46 out of 48 states and 1,486 county organizations.

The Farm Bureau does not oppose these other organizations, but purposes to supplement them, to be as it were, "Their Hired Man."

The main business of these local organizations is marketing, but marketing is not the only worry of the farmer; there is crop production, financing the crops, purchasing to the best advantage, legislation and many other interests. These are all the concerns of the Farm Bureau.

The Farm Bureau will help the farmer by co-operative marketing. This does not mean just boosting the market price for any particular product by demanding more, but by market control. Under the old system that prevails among the greater number of farmers, each farmer is for himself, shipping his produce when he thinks the market is best for that particular product. The result is that everyone is doing the same, which causes the crowding of the markets. Then the supply being greater than the demand results in a very low price, and the farmer is the only one who suffers.

The Farm Bureau purposes to have such oversight of the markets as will enable it to know when to ship, how much to ship to any one market, and when to ship the residue to the other markets of the nation where the demand is greatest.

Furthermore the Farm Bureau purposes to aid the farmer by showing him how to produce a better product at a greater saving of labor and money. For a better product will mean a better price.

The Farm Bureau purposes to help the farmer by co-operative purchasing, buying in bulk, and to better advantage, etc. This will in the end transfer the profit from the pockets of the middlemen or dealer to the pockets of the farmer.

The Farm Bureau helps in the development of better homes and communities. In other lines of labor the bread earner goes from the home. The work is at a separate place, in many cases miles away, and has no connection whatever with the home. But not so with the farmer for the home is an intimate part of the business of farmers. And that which will make his home more attractive and house life more restful will greatly aid his business. Because of the dull, drab life many a young man and girl leave the farm to go to the large town or city.

Then again the Farm Bureau will represent the farmer and his interests in our legislative halls. Other business interests have their lobbyist and representatives who see that laws favorable to their interests are enacted and that their interests are protected. But who represents the farmer? No one, thus the need of the Farm Bureau.

The Farm Bureau is trying to do all these things by co-operation among the farmers. In union there is strength. By helping each other, the farmer can best help himself.

The fee of ten dollars that every member pays to the Farm Bureau goes to the carrying out of its program. The ten dollars of a single farmer could not do much, but when all the farmers and citizens join as they should and ultimately will do, a very large fund thereby will be created. And this full and rounded program of the Farm Bureau will become effective for better farms, homes and larger incomes to the farmers of America.
