Kent News

SATURDAY, JANUARY 24, 1925

It is now reported that David J. Lewis will not be reappointed by President Coolidge on the Tariff Commission. He did not cater to big interests but discharged his duty in an honest and unbiased manner.

The letter in the News last week signed J. H. C. advocating the purchase of a Hospital Ambulance has been favorably commented on. An urgent call was sent here Monday for just such a conveyance to carry a lady from Quaker Neck to Easton Hospital. The Ladies' Club of Smyrna, Del., have undertaken the purchase of a similar vehicle and no doubt when our citizens become aroused to its need some method will be devised to purchase one.

INAUGURATION IN DELAWARE

Stripped of all ostentation but with impressive ceremonies Robert P. Robinson, of Wilmington, bank president, master of the State Grange and treasurer of the National Grange Patrons of Husbandry, in the Dover Opera House, Tuesday, took the oath of office as the fifty-seventh governor of the Commonwealth of Delaware.

James Hall Anderson, lawyer of Dover, member of the State Board of Charities and also of the State Highway Department, took the oath of office as Lieutenant-Governor of Delaware. Mr. Anderson is a graduate of Washington College of the class of 1899 and well thought of in Chestertown.

"MA" FERGUSON AS GOVERNOR

Women of America entered upon a new era Tuesday when one became the Chief Executive of the Lone Star State, greatest in area and one of the largest in population of all the Union.

"Ma" Ferguson, as she is affectionately known all over the land, is Governor Ferguson now.

The inauguration at Austin stood out as one of the most dramatic in American history. For two generations enlightened women of this country had struggled for the elementary privilege of citizenship—the ballot. At an hour of great National stress it was achieved. For once the spiritual power of womankind was to be applied to the highly practical business of government.

With her family present—the husband a former Governor, her two daughters and a grandson—Mrs. Ferguson took the oath of office, and, in a profound hush, kissed the open pages of the ancient Bible on which long-dead Presidents of the Texas Republic were sworn. Most appropriately her lips touched the inspiring lines:

"The Word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto mypath."

That simple act was the final seal of her fidelity to the trust imposed upon her.

All unite in hoping that her record may reflect new glory to womankind.

Governor Ferguson's Address

Teamwork will be the motto of her administration, Governor Ferguson declared in her inaugural address. Progress in matters spiritual as well as material will be striven for, she said. She also advised that many women would be invited to take part in the administration.

"If the example can be set for a higher standard of morals and purity of life and conduct in public servants of the people, I shall feel my administrat$ion has not been in vain. Let us not forget that it is more glorious to lay treasures in Heaven than on earth.

"We women have been recognized and admitted into all the rights and privileges of citizenship. Let us give our State the best that is in us, not so much because we are women, but because we are citizens who are now to stand side by side with men upon the foundation of equal rights and equal justice."

The News wishes to commend the local school authorities in the good sense displayed in holding one session of both schools Tuesday. It was an awful day to turn out the little tots especially.

The 17th annual statement of the Continental Life Insurance Co., of which Frank V. Simpers is the local agent, shows a big margin in assets for protection of its policy-holders. The figures amply demonstrate that the business of the company has continued to develop according to those principles of harmony and just proportion between underwriting, expansion and financial resources by which the leading spirit of the company have been guided from the outset. With these principles steadily in view the management of the company has consistently sought to sense new business in sufficient volume to make the growth of the institution continuous, but at the same time so to regulate this growth that the institution will become constantly stronger in a financial sense. It is evident that these objectives are being attained.

MARYLAND OYSTERS ABOVE SUSPICION

Maryland foresaw years ago the disaster that would result to public health and the State's seafood industry if pollution of the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries were not prevented.

Immediate and comprehensive steps were taken, the result is that Maryland seafoods are good and pure because the water in which they grow is clean, a statement based on overwhelming affirmative evidence.

This makes all the more distressing the virtual paralysis of the industry following reports—false, so far as they relate to the Maryland product—that cases of typhoid fever had been caused by eating raw oysters.

Maryland health officials promptly investigated and proved that the bivalves under suspicion did not come from this State at all. But the harm had been done. The Chicago City Council forbade the eating of raw oysters.

Governor Ritchie, the State health and conservation authorities and leaders in the seafood industry are taking steps to tell the world at large and the oyster-consuming public particularly that Chesapeake Bay oysters are better than any oysters in the world. It is hoped their efforts will be fruitful.

Americans have eaten 600,000,000 bushels of oysters since records have been kept and not a single case of illness has been traced to their condition when taken from the water and placed on the market.

All Maryland is united in the determination that this fine record shall be maintained. Regard for the public welfare, no less than enlightened self,interest, requires that seafood shall be protected from contamination so that it shall be, like Maryland's oysters above suspicion.

TALKING THE OYSTER TO ITS FATAL DEATH

The News has seen for years that the people most interested in the conservation of oysters, fish and game are the ones who do the least talking. Its the fellows who nurse nice fat jobs who are doing all the harm to these industries by their continual advocating various impractical plans, not for conserving, but for continuing jobs.

As a result of "investigating" the oyster by the State Health Department the business has nearly been killed.

L. C. Quinn, of Crisfield, writes as follows to Gov. Ritchie:

"The oyster industry of the Chestpeake Bay, one of the greatest sources of wealth to the State of Maryland and an industry which it has taken 50 years to build up, has been destroyed in a night. What are you going to do about it?

"In the oyster rocks, where was wont to be heard at this season of the year the rattle and clang of the dredge, utter silence reigns.

"At the wharves in Crisfield, the greatest oyster center in the country, boats are tied up in every direction, while the captains and crews line the docks in sullen silence or break up into little groups to discuss the unfortunate situation. At the oyster houses the oyster shuckers are coming and going by the hundreds, with bewilderment written upon their faces as though wondering what it is all about and just how, without employment, they are to get bread for themselves and children during the next three or four months. What are you going to do about it?

"This season nature was more generous than usual. As though to make up for the shortage in supply, she gave us the largest, finest, fattest and purest oysters ever taken from salt water. No source of pollution within 50 miles of the beds. Flavor not equaled and in every part of the country, where epicures gathered to banquet, the praises of the famous Chesapeake Bay salts were sung.

"But, alas, the glory of the Chesapeake oyster has departed. Though the report of typhoid in oysters of the Chesapeake Bay is unfounded, it makes little difference. The damage has been done. Every radio in the country has sung the death song of the oyster and boards of health, in the largest consuming centers have hung up signs of warning and issued orders which prevent their sale.

"Thus dies a great industry, assassinated by members of its own house hold. What are you going to do about it?

"The boards of health of our neighboring States of New Jersy, Delaware, Virginia and North Carolina, though their oyster interests are small compared with Maryland's, recognizing that their industry was threatened with destruction, got on their job and started to work promptly to combat and stop the further spreading of this propaganda. Certificates of purity were given to shippers, health officials sent to the centers of complaint, who were both able and willing to fight for the rights and reputation of their shippers. Space was purchased in daily newspapers and every effort made to convince the public that their oysters 'were not guilty as charged.'

"Nero fiddled while Rome burned." The Maryland State Board of Health, after starting a conflagration which threatens to destroy not only the oyster industry of the Chesapeake Bay, but the entire United States, has sunk into peaceful slumbers, while their man Friday, better known as Sullivan, with his assistant, Bangs, continues to make life a hideous nightmare for the Crisfield oystermen and packers. What are you going to do about it?

"This letter is not intended as a criticism of you, Governor Ritchie, in any manner, but is addressed to you as the Chief Executive of the State of Maryland and the man who appointed the present State Board of Health and to whom the people of the tidewater, whose very existence is at stake, are looking to for relief.

"Why not put men at the head of this board who are wide-awake and who possess ability to cope with this or any other difficult situation which may arise? Men who will encourage business and not destroy it. Men who have sufficient judgment to perform a necessary operation without cutting the heart out of it, not caring whether the patient lived or died under the operation. What are you going to do about it?"

CROUP

Why not give your children the protection of a quick-acting treatment that has been passed down from generation because nothing else does the work quite so well?

Why not do what Mrs. W. H. Krichten, of McSherrystown, Pa., does for her family? "I have used Goff's Cough Syrup for five years," says Mrs. Krichten, "and never found a better cough syrup for Croup. I had many cases of Croup in my family. I had one case of Croup and Diptheria together where the doctor gave the child up, and did not think he would live over night.

"I was giving Goff's Cough Syrup at the time and asked the doctor what he thought of it. He told me to keep on giving it. That was a big help to the child—and he is living today, big and hardy."

Goff's gets to the seat of the trouble. Soothes the inflamed membranes—brings up the phlegm—helps to fight the germs. Contains no dope, no chloroform.
