MESSRS. RUTH AND EMORY COME INTO A FINE FORTUNE

It is always gratifying for the News to tell of the good fortune of its readers and this item refers to two Kent countians who opened a machine shop in Newark, N. J. These two men are Robert R. Emory, brother of Edward W. Emory, Miss Julia and Miss Belle Emory, and Mrs. Adkinson, and DeCoursey Ruth, brother of Mrs. Thomas G. Wroth and John Ruth, of Chestertown.

Twenty or more years ago these two boys left their homes here to make a living. Fortune took them to Newark, N. J., where they formed a partnership for the manufacture of moving picture machinery. A measure of success attended their efforts and they succeeded in building up a thriving business not only in this country, but in other parts of the world as well.

But one day Dame Fortune smiled upon them in a manner little dreamed of by their relatives and friends back home. For several years these boys had studied the reason for a defect existing in practically all moving pictures machines at that time and which has been a source of annoyance to thousands of moving picture audiences throughout the world, this defect being known as the "flicker" which caused the picture to flutter on the screen, affecting the eyesight. The boys brought their inventive genius into play and after a hard struggle they succeeded in inventing a part of machinery which would destroy the "flicker" and enable the machine to throw a steady picture on the screen.

They secured the necessary patent rights, and made ready to manufacture a new machine. They were seriously handicapped for need of funds but one day Fortune led them to New York where they met and formed a business relationship with one Mr. Bayard, who agreed to furnish the necessary capital for the manufacure of the machines on a large scale. What is known as the Bayard Moving Picture Machine Corporation was immediately formed.

The final step in the race for fame and fortune was taken by the United States Government, which, recognizing the superiority of the new invention gave the corporation an order for six machines for use in the U. S. Navy, which immediateyl started a movement on the part of competitor companies to begin negotiations looking to the purchase of the new corporation and its patent rights.

Several weeks ago the Bayard corporation sold out for the munificent sum of $100,000, with the provisio that Emory and Ruth may continue their business in Newark and that they will have the privilege to manufacturing parts for the machine which has virtualy revolutionized the moving picture industry. Emory and Ruth received $40,000 each of the sale price, while their real benefactor and friend, Mr. Bayard, accepted $20,000 the original amount invested by him in the business.

Relatives and friends of the two Chestertown boys here are rejoicing at their merited success.

What may the engaged man give to his fiancée?

THE WHAT, WHEN AND HOW OF REMEMBRANCES . . . DON'T GUESS—ASK YOUR JEWELER

An engagement ring, of course! But what else, during the engagement period may an engaged man give to his fiancée—with propriety and good taste?

This is one of the many puzzling problems in the delicate and intricate art of proper gift-giving.

Certain kinds of gifts, including all forms of jewelry, the engaged man may bestow upon his bride-to-be as freely as his means and wishes sanction. Other types of gifts, such as wearing apparel or furniture, he cannot give at all, without breaching the canons of approved social practice and good form.

There is no finer gift than an Elgin Watch. Featured in a wide style variety and sold at prices ranging from $15 to $1700.

But there are other equally perplexing questions in the etiquette of gift-giving. What, for example, should a bridegroom give to his best man and ushers before the wedding ceremony? And the bride to her brides-maids? What are the proper anniversary and seasonal gifts to friends and relatives?

When you have a delicate gift problem to solve—don't guess—go to an expert for authoritative counsel. See your jeweler. He is past-master in the science of gift selection. His consultations are free.

Serious Fire Narrowly Averted.

Fire extinguishers in the hands of willing and energetic workers unquestionably halted what might have been another serious conflagration at Church Hill, Thursday afternoon. The fire occurred in the rear of the garage operated by Harry D. Massey when a bucket of gasoline ignited from a soldering iron. Louis Porter son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Miffilin Porter of near Centreville, an employe of the garage, suffered painful burns about the hands in attempting to carry the blazing bucket from the building Just as he reached the rear door the bucket upset and the flames quickly spread to the building. The fire was extinguished before an alarm of fire was sounded. There was no damage

FACILITIES FOR YOUR COMMUNITY

Practically any town of any size in the United States periodically reads an item like this about itself: "Telephone company to enlarge its factilities here to care for future growth of the community."

No village is too small to interest the telephone company, whose aim it is to anticipate the telephone needs of every community and rural district.

It is this desire to extend its service to the farthest corners of the nation and into the smallest homes, which has given the United States a telephone service which is so far beyond that enjoyed by any other nation that comparisons are impossible. The telephone, in America, is not confined to government uses, to the aristocracy or to the official class.

No industry is more representative of democracy than the telephone; it serves all on the same basis and with the same courtesy. No other industry has a greater distribution of its stocks and bonds among its employes and the people of the nation.—The Manufacturer, Industrial News Bureau.

THAT ALL USEFUL TELEPHONE BOOK

You boast about your libraries,
Of fussy books and such!
But when your really sift them down
They don't amount to much;
You read a book just one time through
Then put it on a shelf
For some lone, hungry bookworm
To enjoy his little self,
Yes, I'm willing to admit it,
For I'm not a bit stuck up,
'Longside of Burns and Shakespeare
I'm just a mongrel pup;
I'm not dressed up in vellum
With leather coat and band—
But what's printed on my pages
Everyone can understand.
True to the instinct of my kind,
No matter where I roam
I buckle down to business
And call it home, sweet home;
I am the busy housewife's friend,
Sometimes the baby's toy,
And I'm the business ally
Of father and the boy.
You'll find me living in a dive,
Or palace of a "king,"
Or any place beneath the skies
Where telephones may ring;
I'm very well acquainted
With all shades and kinds of men,
And I'm read more in a single year
Than Shakespeare is in ten.

THEY ARE STILL GRINDING FOR THE OYSTER BARS.

Messrs. Editors:

As soon as the State Legislature meets the old cry for leasing the bars begin.

To the consternation of every one who is directly interested in the industry the Conservation Commissioner advocates the leasing of 30,000 acres in the bay, and, insists that such 30,000 acres is barren bottoms in the face of the fact that many thousands of oystermen know that the same is a long established productive one and that by the law of nature. Such a contention on his part is an insult to the intelligence of many thousands of our good citizens.

Mr. Earle has told the oyster committee that the industry once supplied the great number of fifteen million bushels per season. If he knew, why did he not tell the committee also that during that very period the the dredgers not only combed the grounds set apart for them, but that many of them resorted to Hodges bar, Tee Tree, Swan Point, Buoy Rock and tributaries in other counties with a determination fraught with piracy, armed with rifles to fight their way? This is true, hence the fifteen million mark.

Did he tell them that such depredadations continued year after year, using fire arms when occasion required—and until the supply dwindled to ten million bushels If not, why not This is also true as hundreds of tongers and others can and will readily testify to.

Did he tell the committee that similar depredations was the cause of the dwindling of the supply until the catch was only five million bushels? If not, why not?

Did he tell the committee that it is very possible that at least one half of the 30,000 acres he would survey and hand over to the owners of the very vessels that had robbed the bars was depleted bottoms? If not, why not? Speak out Mr. Earle, for the public should know the whys and wherefores before their representatives are called upon to take action on the proposed recommendations.

Did he tell the committee that Captain Howard and Captain Kerr had to sink and kill before any sort of order could be maintained? Please answer, otherwise we will send several hundred perfectly reliable men to Annapolis to give such testimony.

Is it any wonder that the oystermen and others assail the position taken by the Conservation Commissioner. Mr. Earle should know and perhaps does know that his 30,000 acres has yet a small quantity of oysters left, and that i flet alone for a short while would re-seed itself and in a little while bring forth a harvest fit for a king. Under such procedure the State would still own it instead of a corporation.

If a corporation wishes to experiment on barren bottoms, let them; but real conservation should apply, and see that they get only barren bottoms. Let's get at the truth by practical application and bring forever this leasing fallacy to a close. Temporarily depleted bottoms, those that are being glibly called or nicknamed barren bottoms.

If Mr. Earle has been correctly reported by the news writers as having likened some of the oystermen as the "Dog in the Manger," I am very sorry for him; however, it is an evidence of weakness and he can be forgiven.
