NO EVASION IN GOV. AL. SMITH'S ACCEPTANCE

After listening to the speech which Governor Smith, of New York, delivered at Albany Wednesday night, accepting the Democratic presidential nomination, no fair minded person can question its candidness. No issue before the people in the present campaign was overlooked, nor was there any attempt at evasion. One particular declaration seemed to stand out. For some time it has been obvious that in some sections men entrusted with enforcement of the prohibition laws were clothed with this grave responsibility not because of their fitness for the job, but in payment for services to the Republican party. Many are manifestly unfit.

Governor Smith says that, if elected President, he will stop this abuse of power, as well as all other forms of corruption that have made law enforcement in many localities a farce. In fact, it is evidently his intention accepting at face value his promises in that behalf, to sub-ordinate all other conditions to fitness and efficiency, for, he declared, referring to appointments generally, "I will not be influenced in appointments by the question of a person's wet or dry attitude, by whether he is rich or poor whether he comes from the North South, East or West, or by what church he attends in the worship of God." The governor branded the Republican prosperity claim as mythical, likewise its "economy" ballyhoo

The President, Mr. Smith states does ont make the laws. Attention was called to this fact in discussing the prohibition question, in which he reiterated his position, with which the public has been familiar for some time. Expressing his personal opinion that both the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution and the Volstead Act should be modified, and announcing his intention, if elected, of making such a recommendation to Congress, he explained "It will then be for the people and the representatives in the national and state legislatures to determine whether these changes should be made." This, of course, is not a new situation, but it is well to call attention to the fact that, no matter how vehemently the President may urge changes in the Constitution or laws, it is up to the people whether changes will be made.

No one doubts where the governor stands on the prohibition question which, he believes, should be determined by referendum within the states after Congress has fixed what he considers reasonable limits. He again expressed the hope that the saloon is banished forever.

The governor is sound on the farm problem. He believes in approaching the subject with an open mind and a sympathetic attitude, and calling upon those who know most about the subject to suggest equitable and effective legislation. In this behalf he calls attention to the fact that while the McNary-Haugen bill was twice vetoed during Republican control, no adequate substitute was ever recommended.

The governor shows, by what he says, that he has a good grasp of the requirements of government; that he believes government should be administered in the interest of all—not a few—and, should he be successful in November, there is every reason to believe that he can be counted upon to exert his best efforts in this direction.

GOV. AL. SMITH MAKES A GREAT DEMOCRATIC PARTY SPEECH

At Albany, N. Y., Wednesday evening Governor Alfred E. Smith was formally notified of his nomination for President by the Democratic National Convention, and delivered his speech of acceptance. It was a ripsnorting great speech of which we'll have more to say later.

Governor Smith, the Democratic nominee for President, in a statement completely answered his critics who contended that his legislative record would not bear inspection.

They have not pinned anything on the Governor yet, and his personal and public life has been raked with a fine tooth comb.
