A MESSENGER OF PEACE

This great country has welcomed with open arms the arrival of Premier Ramsay MacDonald, of Great Britain. He comes as a messenger of peace, and a nobler motive never stired the heart of man. The masses will hail with joy the accomplishment of such an end.

Having hewed out his own career with unfliching labor and risen to a power in Great Britain which a generation ago seemed beyond the reach of any man like him, he remains unpretentious, unspoiled, with dignity fitting his position, yet with the simple poise of one who knows how fleeting is fame and by what aid of good fortune men arrive at eminence.

When to his individual appeal is added the importance of the political movement which he represents and the party which he leads, the significance of Mr. MacDonald's visit to the United States is heightened. At Washington it is explained that his conferences with President Hoover will be "unofficial." This can mean only that the two men can make no agreements which will be binding without the consent in Great Britain of Parliament and of the Congress in the United States. Except for this qualification, it is impossible to divest their meeting of a pronounced official character. It isbecause he is Prime Minister that Mr. MacDonald's unexplained act of friendship in coming to this country makes so deep an impression. It cannot be doubted that his exchange of views with President Hoover is intended to lead to concclusions and to actions of the highest politieal importance both for the two countries directly involved and for the rest of the world. It is certain that Mr. MacDonald did not journey to Washington merely to be entertained socially. Affairs of state brought him, and affairs of state were talked about when he conferred with President Hoover.

Mr. MacDonald represents a powerful party and a strong government. Otherwise he would not be here at this time. Into his Cabinet he was able to summon men of experience and ability. Mr. Henderson, Foreign Secretary, has struck out a new policy in Egypt with great intelligence and firmness and has rightly interpreted the longing of the Labor party for international security and disarmament.

This meeting has already resulted in calling of a parley of five nations in Londan next January when an agreement will be reached as to armament.

THAT "FLEECING" ACT

The Kent News:

Recently the News stated that a gambler traveling with a circus which visited Chestertown, had fleeced some misguided individual out of $1.25. About two years ago a similar incident happened when shortchange men and tin-horn gamblers buncoed some of the unwary.

To some this may appear funny, but to many who pay high taxes, part of which is used to pay salaries to officers for the protection of the public it will be a sad reflection on a community in which apparently "anything goes."

For an officer to say that he knew nothing about these violations of the law is simply to admit incompetence as well as ignorance. He is paid to know.

The public would be justified in assuming that it was to the advantage and profit of the officers not to know what was going on.

We have indeed reached a sorry pass when any insignificant officer can select the law he chooses to enforce. CITIZEN.

All persons are cautioned against trespassing by men, women, children or animals on the Marvil Package Co.'s property in Chestertown as the law will be enforced. Marvil Package Co. o12-3t*

BALTIMORE LIVESTOCK SHOW

Those thinking of beef production as a means of marketing home raised feeds without the labor incident to dairying, will be interested in the Livestock Show to be held in Baltimore, October 22 to 24. Here they will see hundreds of feeder steers of varying ages and degrees of flesh. These steers will be judged so that beginners may observe the types that meet the modern requirments. This show is the means of bringing into Maryland suitable feeder steers.

The many Kent county farmers who produce fine quality corn with which they have won numerous prizes in past years will be pleased to learn that Professor Oldenburg, of the Extension Service of the University of Maryland will spend one or two days in aiding growers to select their exhibits.

After waiting patiently for over 10 years the closing link of the state roads system from Ridgely to Baltimore Corner, a distance of nine miles has been finally completed and thrown open to the public. This road now connects Ridgely with all points north. Instead of automobilists traveling all the way round — via Goldsboro and Denton—the distance between these towns and Ridgely has been cut short several miles, by the opening of the new road. It will also open a shorter and much faster route to parties who have business in Denton, the county seat of Caroline county; Federalsburg, Cambridge, Preston, Hurlock and Salisbury—and onto Ocean City and Rehoboth.

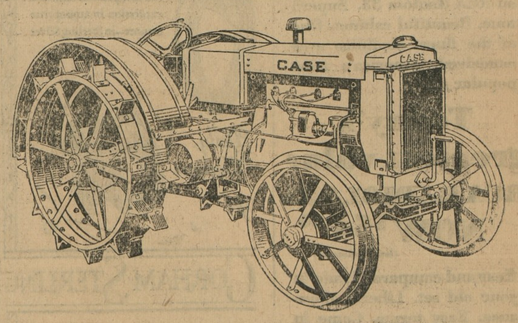
THE NEW CASE MODEL C TRACTOR



SIZE 17-27

Great Power for Its Size and Weight

Its great power for the size and weight places the Model "C" in a class by itself, far in advance of present day tractors. While it is only 48 inches high and weighs but little more than two ordinary draft horses, this powerful, compact tractor operates a 22x36 thresher with all attachments and pulls a 2 or 3 bottom plow depending on soil conditions.

Powerful Efficient Engine

The engine, the heart of the tractor, is designed along the lines of the most advanced engineering practice. It has removable cylinder sleeves and honed cylinders. It has a heavy, three-bearing crankshaft, drilled for pressed lubrication to all its bearings. It has a combination gasoline and kerosene manifold very efficient in the use of fuel. High tension magneto with impulse coupling for easy starting, enclosed flyball governor and other high grade features add to the efficiency and dependability of this powerful engine.

Sealed Against Dust

The entire tractor is sealed against dust and dirt, thus prolonging the life af all working parts. An entirely New Case air cleaner of the oil filter type removes all harmful particles from all the air which enters the engine.

Specifications of Model "C" Tractor. Speeds—3 forward and 1 reverse. Turning radius, 10 foot outside. Lubrication—Oil supplied under pressure to main crankshaft bearings, through drilled holes in the crankshaft to connecting rod bearings and through drilled holes in engine block to crankshaft bearings. Oil pressure supplied by geared type pump. Entire transmission enclosed in one housing and operates in oil bath.
